

New British Party Gains First Victory

By Leonard Downie Jr.

By Leonard Lowine Jr. Washington Post Service LONDON — Shirley Williams, a leader of Britain's new Social Democratic Party, became its first elected member of Parliament with a decisive by-election victory in what had been one of the safest seats in the country for Prime Minister Marinaret Thatcher's soverning Com-Minister Margaret Thatcher's governing Con-servarive Party. Mrs. Williams, 51, won 49.1 percent of Thursday's vote in the middle-class suburban constituency of Crosby, just outside Liverpool. She easily defeated the Conservative, John Butcher, a 39-year-old accountant, who received 39.5 percent. The Labor Party candidate, John Backhouse, 28, a high school math-ematics teacher, got only 9.5 percent and lost his election deposit.

Mrs. Williams' victory is the biggest boost Mits. Williams victory is the orgens boost yet for the recently formed alliance of the So-cial Democratic and Liberal parties, which of-fers voters a centrist alternative to Mrs. Thatcher's Conservatives on the right and La-bor on the left. The alliance won its first parti-parties left. The alliance won its first partiamentary election five weeks ago when Wil-liam Pitt, a Liberal, won a previously Conserv-ative seat in the south London suburb of Croydon. The Conservatives had held Crosby through 11 elections since the constituency was formed in 1948, and the loss by such a large margin is the most serious political setback for Mrs. Thatcher since she became prime minister in 1979. The poor showing by Labor is the latest in a series of electoral humiliations it has suf-ferred since heing deschy divided by militant fered since being deeply divided by militant left-wingers demanding that its policies and leadership become more radically Socialist. After the announcement early Friday morning that she had turned what had been a 19.272-vote Conservative majority in Crosby into a 5.289-vote Social Democratic majority. Mrs. Williams said, "The election of the first Social Democratic Party candidate ever in this country is the beginning of a great movement of history, an idea that has found its time."

She predicted that the political momentum of the Social Democratic-Liberal alliance would eventually force Mrs. Thatcher's gov-ernment to modify its rightist economic poli-cies, and that the alliance would replace Labor as a more Ritish party and experts to victory. as a major British party and sweep to victory in the next national election in 1983 or 1984. Mrs. Williams called this "a crusade to save Britain from political extremism."

David Steel, the Liberal Party leader, said the success of the alliance so far was far different from equally dramatic but historically iso-lated Liberal by-election victories in years past. "We oow have a credible alliance," he said, "not a minor Liberal Party which was the repository for the midterm protest vote." Mrs. Williams' victory gives the Social Dem-ocrats 24 members in the House of Commons. Most of them defected from Labor, one as re-cently as 10 days ago. Three of the four foun-ders and current co-leaders of the Social Democrats --- Mrs. Williams; David Owen and Wil-liam Rodgers, all former Labor Cabinet minis-ters --- oow have parliamentary seats. The fourth, Roy Jenkins, a former deputy Labor leader who has been favored to become the sole leader of the Social Democrats, nar-embly leader of the Social Democrats in the the sole leader of the Social Democrats, har-rowly lost a by-election earlier this year in the Labor stronghold of Warrington in northern England and is expected to try again when more seats are vacated by death or retirement. With Mr. Fitt, the Liberals now have 12 members of Parliament, providing the Social Democratic-Liberal alliance with a total of 36, the largest postwar third-party representation in the House of Commons. The Conservatives still have 336 seats, Labor has 245 and minor regional parties hold 16. If the alliance can demonstrate it represents more than a passing protest against the current problems of the Conservatives and Labor and can hold the more than 40 percent it has been winning in opinion polls and parbamentary by-elections, it could win a majority in Parliament in the next national election or at least enough seats to become part of a coalition gov-CIMMENI.

If they win a share of power, the alliance parties are committed to changing Britain's voting system to proportional representation, which would make centrist, multiparty governments much more likely.

Support for Mixed Economy

Mrs. Williams stood on the Social Democrais' comparatively bland support for Brit-ain's current mixed economy, membership in the Common Market and nuclear arms reductions through international negotiation. She emphasized the Social Democrats' policies — reducing unemployment, a contrailed increase in government spending on public works and in government spending on public works and job-training programs — that closely resemble policy changes Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative critics have been urging her to make. During the campaign, Mrs. Williams also demonstrated her personal popularity as the leading media personality of the new party. Al-though she holds some of the most radical po-litical views of the party's collective leadership, such as favoring the abolition of all private such as favoring the abolition of all private schools, she showed an ability to appeal to vnters as a warm, moderate politician

EEC Falls Short On Accords, but Gains Are Seen

By Axel Krause

International Herald Tribune LONDON - Leaders of the 10 European Economic Community countries ended a two-day summit meeting here Friday without resolving key questions on budgetary or agricultural reform or defining oew directions for the community's activities.

But various delegation sources said that the meeting should not be considered an outright failure and that the test of the EEC's ability to cope with its problems will come at the meeting of foreign ministers to be beld either before Christmas or in January. The summit's final communiqué stated that the foreign ministers will consider "these difficult prob-lems and make recommendations to the beads of government which we hope to be able to approve without a further meeting." Prime Mioister Margaret Thatcher, who presided over the conference, said that the unre-solved issues may have to be held over for the next EEC summit, which is to be beld in March in Brussels. But she described the meeting as "extremely construc-tive" and said it lacked any "acrimoninus discussion."

President Francois Mitterrand of France said at the news conference Friday evening that four is-sues remained to be resolved. He said they included Britain's financial contribution; balancing the EEC budget; protecting small- and medium-sized diary farmers, pri-marily in France, and arranging "well-defined" relationships between the richer member countries and those in the Mediterranean area, particularly Greece. Commenting on the current arrangement under which Britain's contribution to the budget is made, Mr. Mitterrand said he was "nnt hostile to continuing rebates to Britain which are being granted under the 1980 agreement."

But he said that any budgetary relief for Britain should be "temporary and regressive" and that the agreement should not be extended for seven years, as Britain is suggesting. French sources said

Mr. Mitterrand met fur an hour Friday morning with Mr. Schmidt, and delegation sources said they reached a broad understanding on limiting Britain's hudget contribu-tions for three years. But they also agreed, according to the sources, that Britain would have to remain a net contributor to the EEC budg-et under any budget reform scheme.

It also appeared that Mr. Mit-terrand's insistence on protecting the interests of small French dairy farmers complicated chances for broad agreement no reducing the costs of the agricultural policy. In his meeting with Mr. Schmidt, the French leader emphasized the oeed for protecting French dairy farmers against competition from the efficient, industrialized dairy farms in Northern Europe.

Mr. Mitterrand also told Mr. Schmidt that France was prepared to support EEC Commission recommendatioos that European wheat and grain prices be lowered to be closer in line with world lev-els. But he said this could only be accomplished if protective limitations were placed on imported producer.

Similarly nther, smaller farm producers, musbly Ireland, the Netherlands and Denmark, were reported to be highly defensive of their agricultural interests.

Among the proposals put off by the summit was the plan presented earlier this year, by West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Italian Fureign Minister Emilio Culumbo, to expand the political role of EEC institutions, including the European Parliament.

Britain's eventual participatinn in the European Monetary System will be taken up at the March summit, Mrs. Thatcher confirmed Friday night. She also said that she was very understanding of the high budgetary contribution being made by the West Germans. She indicated that she would be willing to support a reduction in West Germany's contribution, the highest of any EEC meml

Warsaw Moves to Outlaw Strikes As Party Assails Union Extremists

WARSAW - Poland's Communist Party acted on Friday to outlaw strikes as it warned that ex-tremists in the Solidarity free trade union were destroying the country with "strike terrorism."

The Interpress news agency said Gen. Wojciech Jarnzelski, the pre-mier and party chief, announced legal steps to halt strikes when he made his opening remarks to a session of the policy-making Central committee session, police in War-saw cordoned off an area close to the main firemen's officer training academy after about 380 cadets ignored a deadline to end a sit-in protest and called on workers to come to protect them. The firemen were demanding the demilitariza-tion of their school.

Their protest was one of several centers of tensioo in Poland, in-cluding an almost total campus shutdown. Frivate farmers main-tained si: / t public buildings in several cities, oil workers remained on strike in the Krosno area and a strike at secondary schools spread throughout the Lublin area.

The bishops called for the creation of "new and indispensable structures" and said there could be no conciliation as lnng as the mass media made use of half-truths.

This was seen as a clear statement of support for Solidarity's arguments that a government-union alliance would be workable only if there were basic political chan and for the union's campaign for access to the mass media.

Meanwhile, Solidarity reported that it had wrested concessions from the government in the field of economic control, but nn major breakthrough in partnership was expected until further high-level

Israel has said it will not permit France, Italy, Britsin and the Netherlands to participate because of statements made by them favoring the principle of a homeland for the Palestinians and a role for the Palestine Liberation Organization in negotiations.

Mr. Shamir declared before taking his overnight flight from Tel Aviv that the Europeans' "condi-tions are unacceptable."

An Israeli source said Mr. Shamir's optiming position in the talks with Mr. Haig would be that "the Europeans are unacceptable with the statements but are acceptable without the statements."

> But the source, who requested anonymity, said there might be some way out of the impasse because both the United States and Israel "want European participa-tion." It was thought possible that the Israelis might agree to postpone a decision, now set for Sunday, nn whether to accept the Europeans as part of the Sinai force.

Mr. Shamir was scheduled to return in Israel soon after the meeting with Mr. Haig. Mr. Shamir plans to be in Israel in time for a meeting Sunday of the Israeli Cabinct, which was expected to reject European participation in the mise could be worked out.

The Israeli government also sent a military team to Washington to resume discussions at the Pentagon on new strategic ties with the United States. A U.S. plan, submilited to the Israelis 10 days ago, a state of multary cooperation.

The disputes over European participation in the Sinai force and Middle East strategy are straining U.S. Israeli relations. The Reagan administration fears severe dam-age to the Camp David peace process if the Europeans are prevent-ed from participating. But the Begin government is angry with the Western Europeans for pushing for a role for the PLO.

There was speculation in Israel that a compromise might be struck in which the administration would step up military cooperation with Israel in return for accepting the Europeans. But Mr. Shamir took a tough stance after meeting Thursiav with Mr. Begin.

Empty-Handed Polish Merchants Face Consumers' Wrath

By Thomas W. Netter The Associated Press

WARSAW --- Shopkeepers short of merchandise in Poland are facing increasing violence from the long lines of disappointed consumers who wait for hours to buy what is not there, or reach the door just at closing time.

The fears of the front-line workers --- clerks and cashiers in state-run shops - have grown to the extent that 10,000 shopkeepers threatened a strike during the week. They re-lented when officials promised that police would react faster to calls for help.

In one Warsaw clothing shop that sells dresses, jackets, a variety of women's wear and toiletries, a sign was posted: We are not guilty. There are no goods. Don't beat us."

The sign — soon copied in other stores — went up last eek after a furious crowd of shoppers saw a shipment of clothing arrive just before closing time. "They forced as to stay open for hours and sell the jackets that were brought here," a shopworker said, asking not in be identified and that the name of his store not be used.

"They filled the room here, smoked cigarettes and wouldn't leave," he said. "And when it was over we had five times the amount of money we're allowed to keep here overnight and the banks were closed. What were we to do?

lo addition, the official news media have reported an increase in crime that sometimes is termed "alarming" by commentators, police and Communist Party officials.

"It may just be lack if something to do, but it may also show the general feeling of pent-up anger and frustration about the situation in a generally loosened climate," a West-ern diplomane observer said recently. Among the incidents that led to the strike threat were:

A woman shopkeeper in Brodnica, near Thrun in northwestern Poland, had a heart attack and died after cus-tomers began breaking windows in the store where she was working.

 A man waiting with others in Rzeszow to buy vocka ied — apparently of suffocation, trampling or a heart atdied tack - when people rushed intn the store to buy liquor.

· The state oews agency PAP said customers had demolished display stands in several stores and forced shop attendants in work late until all goods were sold.

· In a department store in Bialystok, northeast Poland, a crowd cut the clothing of shop personnel with razors, the agency reported.

· In Lomza, northeast Poland, a crowd barricaded the shopkeepers inside a store.

Few such cases are reported where Poles line up for meat and other essential foods - places where violence might seem more likely to occur.

The news agency, in a commentary in its report, suggest ed that there may be a sinister motive — a profit motive — for some people's desire to buy. "Such cases often occur in front of shops selling durable goods rather than foodstuff," the agency said. "All those durables sold there can later be fnund at bazaars or through advertisements in the papers."

Some shopkeepers have followed that line in a popular poster appearing on many Warsaw shops. It said: "The robber is guilty, so let's hang the shopkeeper."

"We are not thieves and speculators," said another, "That's what they [the news media] tell you and that is how they cover up the inability to prodoce enough th sell."

Rugby Issue May Affect Vote in New Zealand

WELLINGTON, New Zealand - New Zealanders vote Saturday in a general election that is likely to be decided by the unpredictable impact of the divisive recent South African rugby tour and the performance of a newly emergent third party.

The intentions of the 1.8 million voters remain unclear, and most analysts say that the parliamentary election is the most difficult to forecast in 50 years. Traditional electoral indicators point to a victory by the opposition Labor Party over the National Party of Prime Minister Robert Muldoon, 60, who has served two three-year terms. Virtually every government in New Zealand

In the last general election, the National Party won 51 seats, the Labor Party 40 and the Social Credit Party one.

Under normal circumstances, the present widespread discontent over 15-percent annual inflation, 5-percent unemployment and five years of economic stagnation would cause the anti-incumbent trend to continue. But as Mr. Muldoon has noted, this is no normal election. The reasons are the rugby tour two months ago and the emergence of the Social Credit

League, a third party comparing itself to Brit-ain's new Social Democratic Party. The tour divided the country and stirred emotions. Many liberal, middle-class New Zealanders were dismayed by the violence when anti-apartheid demonstrators and police

Mr. Muldoon refused to ban the tour, and many middle-class New Zealanders were horrified by his attacks on black Africans and others who criticized his attitude.

troversy over political censorship of the press, the Israeli government has closed the West Bank Arabic and English-language newspaper, Al Fair, for publishing "encourt" of terrorism and articles deemed to be a danger to security in the occupied territories.

The order Thursday was given by Interior Minister Yosef Burg with the approval of Prime Minis-ter Menachem Begin, who Wednesday condemned Al Fajr in a speech to parliament. Mr. Begin said the newspaper had expressed jubilation over the murder of a moderate Palestinian leader and his son in Ramallah on Nov. 17.

Invoking a 1933 press ordinance, part of an emergency secur-ity act carried over from the British mandate of Palestine, Mr. Burg suspended Al Fajr for one month. Two weeks ago, Al Fajr was suspended for a weck by the Israeli military censor, touching off criti-cism of Israeli censorship policies by not only Arabs but by Israeli civil rights activists. Israel's Supreme Court ordered a compro-mise in which Al Fajr agreed to submit to the military censor articles that have a direct bearing on security in the West Bank.

Interior Ministry spokesman itzhak Agasi said Thursday that Mr. Burg signed the order "after he learned that ever since the paper began to reappear, items were published in it that were liable to endanger the public welfare, in-cluding words of praise for acts of terror and murder, and encouragement of their commission. Al Fajr editor Hanna Siniora de-nied he had published inflammatory articles, and said the closing was a "political act" stemming from Al Fair's opposition to the Israeli-supported Village League, an or-ganization of Palestinian moderates that the military gov-ernment is attempting to establish in the West Bank as an alternative to the Palestine Liberation Organization. West Bank nationalists have branded the Village League as a "collaborationist" organization, The order cited this week's English-language edition of Al Fajr, one of three Palestinian weeklies published in East Jerusalem and published in East Jerusalem and read widely in the West Bank, Mr. Burg did not specify any articles, but editors at AI Fair said he ap-parently had in mind two stories, one reporting on the assassination of Ramallah Village League presi-dent Yousef Khatib, and the other reporting on Israeli development of nuclear arms. Experts Still Seek Cause of Deaths From Toxic Cooking Oil in Spain

The Associated Press MADRID --- Seven months after 8-year-old Jaime Vaquero García doubled over one night with stom-ach cramps and high fever, more than 200 Spaniards have followed him to the grave, victims of poi-soned cooking oil and one of the most nightmarish public health scandals in Europe. The affliction the press now

"There is no antidote, no mirac-ulous cure, nothing but hope," said the news magazine Cambio 16.

Despite months of research and tests, no solution has been found by Spanish toxicologists, visiting experts from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control or the World Health Organization.

Television May Be the Real Audience for U.S. House's Ritual 'Morning Hour'

By Warren Weaver Jr. New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - It is just after 10 o'clock on a Thursday morning in the somnolent chamber of the House of Representatives. The chaplain has präyed for all 14 lawmakers pres-ent. Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. has given his blessing to the previous day's journal and three messages from the Senate have been duly received.

One of the four members in the front row seats, Rep. James C. Wright Jr., Democrat of Texas, rises, and the speaker greets him: "The gentleman from Texas."

"I request permission to address the House for one minute," the congressman says, ex-creasing his priority as majority leader.

"The gentleman is recognized for not to ex-ceed one minote," the Speaker responds.

Rep. Wright strides to a lectern in the well of the chamber facing the Democratic seats, which lie to the speaker's right. He puts his one-page text on the lectern and booms into the microphone: "Mr. Speaker, the House has twice voted by overwhelming margins'

The "morning hour," a congressional ritual that has taken on new meaning with the penetration of the House chamber by television. had begun. In the next 32 minutes, 19 more members each delivered one minute's worth of oratory on the subject of their choice, to an audience that consisted almost entirely of people waiting to make one-minute speeches.

Like much of the oratory, if oot the deci-sion-making in Congress, the morning hour is actually addressed to an audience other than the visible one. On this Thursday, there were only 53 spectators looking on and a solitary reporter in the press gallery.

Some participants in the morning hour were really addressing the readers of the Coogres-sional Record, where their words would appear the oext day. Many of them will make reprints of their remarks in the Record and mail them to constituents, giving the vague impression that the speeches were delivered at the climax of a tumultuous House debate.

Perhaps most important, the one-minute speeches were also delivered before the unblinking television cameras that have recorded the proceedings of the House for the past 32 months. Any member may oow buy a film clip of any speech from the House clerk's office and offer it to his local television stations as a news item.

The ritualistic character of morning hour turns out to be fairly flexible. Most speakers request and receive permission to "revise and extend" their remarks, polishing up the printed versioo and adding material beyond the oneminute limit.

It is difficult to determine how moch the lure of television has fed the institution of the morning hour. The House clerk's office reports that no records are kept "for First Amendment reasons" of how many members buy film clips. apparently lest the tally have a chilling effect oo freedom of publicity. But House aides who have watched the ceremony for years are convinced there are more one-minute speeches since the cameras began rolling.

House rules prohibit any member from using the television recordings of sessions "for political purposes," which has been carefully defined as inclusion in campaign commercials for radio or television. But House rules hind only House members, and anyone can buy the film elips.

هجدا من الرجل

In the 1980 elections, candidates challenging House incumbents, in at least two instances, bought House television clips of their oppo-nents, focused on the less glamorous and coherent segments of their floor speeches and used the negative material in campaign commercials

The Senate has a version of the morning hour, called "routine morning business," which like many things in that body, is windier and less tightly organized. Members are giveo time for speeches oo any subject, but the segments are likely to be at least 15 or 30 minutes.

No self-respecting senator, it seems, could con-template saying anything at all in one minute.

In routine morning business, the Senate chamber is even more empty than the House at morning hour. Senators generally do oot arrive on the floor until just before their time slot opens. Occasionally, to avoid the solitary echo of his own voice, a senator will organize a sort of mock debate, inviting a handful of likeminded colleagues to join him on the floor and provide background oratory.

A resolution authorizing television cameras in the Senate for the first time has been approved in committee and is scheduled for floor debate io coming mooths. If it is approved, the Senate's routine morning business may come less routine and more businesslike in the future

Takese Interviews

Mr. Allen's friend and associate, Mr. Takase, spoke twice with Mainichi this week. In an article that appeared Thursday, Mr. Ta-kase told Mainichi "my wife, Chizuko, did everything" to ar-range the interview with Mrs, Reagan. The interview eventually took place with Mrs. Takase serving as interpreter for two other women working for the magazin

"I was not involved in it at all," he was quoted as saying in break-ing a public silence that had lasted since it was disclosed on Nov. 13 that an investigation was under way of the acceptance by Mr. Allen the $1,000. But Mr. Takase changed his account in the second interview scheduled to appear in the newspaper Saturday.

Mr. Takase could oot be reached for comment on the change in his account of the events that preceded the interview at the White House, Mr. Allen has said that he received an initial request for the interview and that he turned it over to others for "evaluation." He has not said who made the initial request. Mr. Takase's disclosures underline the close relationship between Mr. Takase, a director of Technova, a small research group here, and Mr. Allen.

"He is my intimate friend since 1955," Mr. Takase was quoted as saying in the first Mainichi inter-view Thursday. Mr. Takase's role as a go-between for top politicians here and Washington is obscure. He said in the latest Mainichi interview that he arranged a meeting between Takeo Fukuda, a former Japanese premier, and Mr. Reagan in Washington on March 20.

"I admit I was responsible for arranging former Premier Fuku-da's meeting with President Reagan this year," he told Mainichi after he was asked about the matter. The claim could not be confirmed with Mr. Fukuda's off-

In the telephone interview in Washington, Mr. Allen said Thurs-day that he would not "terminate friendships" with some of his former Japanese associates or clients or with Peter D. Hannaford, the purchaser of the consulting busi-acss, simply "because I've become a public official." A report published during the week suggested that his installment sale of the Potomac International Corp. might have placed him in a conflict of interest. The report raised questions about Mr. Allen's continuing relationship with Mr. Hannaford, Mr. Hannaford's elients, some of whom were Mr. Allea's clients when he owned Potomac, and a Japanese professor, with whom Mr. Allen has long cajoyed a close business and social relationship."

Vietnam, Russia Sign Pact

"I find it particularly revolting to suggest that friendships of many years' standing are seen to cootain inherent conflicts of interest," Mr. Allen said. "The double standard, the application of double standards by the press - by the media - must stop.

Allen Example

Mr. Allen asked during the interview, "How can there be a conflict?" and went on to answer his own question: "If, for example, one guy leaves a law firm and leaves his accounts, is there a conflict if he meets with the lawyer who takes over those accounts or the former client, particularly if he excuses himself from matters pertaining to the client. The answer is clearly no."

Richard A. Hanser, the deputy counsel to the President, said he had reviewed Mr. Allen's sale of Potomac and found no conflict of interest. Mr. Hauser said that Mr. Allen had no continuing sales relationship with former Potomac clients and that the debt was owed to him by the Hannaford Co. Mr. Allen sold his Potomac consulting business on Jan. 19 to the Hannaford Co., a concern owned by Mr. Hannaford and several business associates, according to Mr. Hannaford. Mr. Hannaford was an aide to Ronald Reagan before Mr. Reagan became president

Mr. Allen provided details on the sale during the interview. He said that while Mr. Hannaford agreed to pay off the installment debt over a three-year period, both he and Mr. Hannsford expected the debt to be retired within a few months.

"He wants to get rid of the obli-ation," Mr. Allen said of Mr. Hannaford, who said in an interview last week that Mr. Allen was owed "a modest amount" that would be paid off in three to four months.

Mr. Allen said Thursday that Mr. Hannaford's company still owed him about $50,000 and had paid off about $20,000 of the debt since Mr. Allen had been in office. "How can 1 be in a conflict of Mexican officials said Thursday that the trip by Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto was planned some time before this week's visit to Mexico City by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., but they said that U.S.-Nicaraguan relations would certainly be dis-

The sources, who requested that they oot be identified, said reports were received last week that one or more assassination teams might infiltrate the United States from Canada or another way. There were indications that these warnings, originatiog in the Middle East, mentioned six assassins and listed their names.

When U.S. Diplomats Turn to Writing, How Much Should They Tell?

By Bernard Gwenzman New York Tunes Service

WASHINGTON - As William H. Sullivan recounts the tale, it was "a complete surprise" when he was asked in 1977 to become the U.S. ambassador to Iran. Mr. Sullivao, perhaps the leading Southeast Asian specialist in the Foreign Service, had never served in the Middle East and "knew little about its culture or its ethos."

"While I recognized the importance of Iran, the proposal did not make me jump for joy," the retired diplomat says in a 296-page book, "Mission to Iran," which has just been published.

Mr. Sullivan, it turned out, was to be the last U.S. envoy to Iran. He was there when Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi left the country and Ayatollah Rubollah Khomeini returned from exile. He departed seven months before the takeover of the U.S. Embassy.

Now, just two years later, he has written a highly readable, controversial memoir that is, in effect, a or de coeur by a proud diplomat who makes it clear that he thinks President Jimmy Carter's White House, and in particular Zbigniew Brzezinski. Mr. Carter's national security adviser, did as much as anyone to "lose" Iran.

Unneeded Sinai Frictions

It seemed good news that Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands had offered to take part in the peace force being organized by the United States to police the Sinai after the Israelis finish evacuating next April. It would give the United States some welcome company in its sponsorship of Camp David. With any luck, those taking part would end up bored to tears but in proud possession of world-class volleyball teams.

How regrettable that an exercise meant to draw nations together has produced yet more friction. The trouble lies not only between Istael and the Europeans, who wish to join the force in order to get a voice in the next stage of Middle East diplomacy and to join in a way that will let them demonstrate their rejection of Camp David to their Arab oil suppliers. There is also a disagreement between Israel and the United States, which wants the Israelis to stop grumbling about the Europeans' verbal formulations and to accept the modest benefits of European participation in the force.

The dust has not yet settled from the AWACS controversy and from Mr. Reagan's remarks on the Saudi peace plan. (That plan is now under a dark new cloud of uncertainty as a result of the abrupt shattering of the Arab summit called to promote it.) But the Israeli foreign minister has hastened to Washington to untangle the Sinai issue. Meanwhile, U.S.-Israeli plans for strategic cooperation are coming into public dispute.

Some of the trouble between these two friendly and like-minded countries is not of their making. The European performance is shabby. On the future of the Palestinians there are many questions, but the peace between Egypt and Israel is here and now. It would be nice to have allies unashamed to support the single part of any Mideast peace process that 1) exists and 2) works.

But much of the strain between the United States and Israel is of their own making. President Reagan has yet to find an effective way to manage this uniquely complex relationship. The handles to its separate parts seem to be scattered among subordinates insensitive to the requirements of coordination and tact. Often, when Mr. Reagan himself joins in, he leaves people asking whether he understands what has gone before. On his part, Prime Minister Begin has chosen to treat each issue that comes along as a do-ordie test of American fidelity. He seems intent on compelling the United States to choose between its Israeli interests and its Arab interests, when the basic American policy is to try to pursue them both.

No manner of conducting relations can crase the real differences that lie between the United States and Israel. This is all the more reason to keep extraneous differences from clogging the machinery. No substantial improvement can be expected if the matter is not addressed at the top.

Praying for Reaganomics

Before I pray for my wife and children at night, I pray for lower interest rates. - Senator Jake Garn.

Someone up there may be listening; interest rates have fallen sharply in the weeks since the Utah senator expressed those priorities. But the cost of borrowing has fallen only because loan demand is off, reflecting poor business prospects during a recession. Once the economy picks up, interest rates are likely to soar again. Many businessmen who not-long ago saw tight credit as the economic solution now see it as part of the problem.

In a way, they are right. High interest exacts a terrible, unjustly selective price in lost output and in unemployment. But given the political constraints President Reagan has imposed on himself, tight credit remains the only dependable weapon against inflation.

Controlling inflation with monetary policy seems simple enough in theory. By limiting the amount banks have to lend, the Federal Reserve forces borrowers who cannot afford high rates out of the market. And that, in turn, reduces the demand for a range of goods and puts downward pressure on wages and prices. But there is, alas, a catch - more than one. in fact.

Consider some effects of high interest rates:

MADRID - As Spain emerges from yet another round of rumors and fears of an impending coup, this jittery nation faces crucial questions: To be successful, does a coup have to be carried out with the help of tanks, armored trucks and beavy artillery?

And don't the increasingly pressing and open demands from some military areas mean that parliamentary democracy in Spain is already a lost cause?

The answer to the first question is no. Pal-ace conps are not new to Spain. They can adopt many forms and can be just as effective as violent uprisings. The answer to the second question is:

Before military forces took to the streets in Valencia and paramilitary Civil Guards stormed the Cortes in Madrid last February, tects more impersonal reasons.

ONDON - The oldest of the industrial L democracies holds up a mirror to the others. The political glory of Britain, its two-party system, is breaking up, and the general lesson is that central political institutions in the advanced countries are coming under enormous, cracking pressure. The British political system was built around a strong middle class with an aversion to extremes. Electoral law provides that the winner takes all in each parliamentary constituency. Two parties, but not more, have a good chance and a strong incentive to win a majority of the constituencies. Since most of the voters are in the middle, the two parties must compete at the center of the electorate.

Stable, centrist government was a conseconservatives ruled for a dozen consecutive years in the 1950s and 1960s. Thereafter Harold Wilson won four general elections for Labor. The similarity between the two parties was so pronounced that their eco-nomic policies were described in a word, "Butskellism," concocted from the names of two finance ministers: R.A. Butler, a Tory, and Hugh Gaitskell of Labor. Now it is different. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher deliberately keeps her rhetor-ic hard right. She clings tightly to far-out monetary policy, and refuses, despite high inflation and 11-percent unemployment, to make what she calls with typical exaggera tion a "U-turn."

She is a disenlightened Tory, and dismisses as "wets" Conservatives who spring from the landed gentry and embody the principle of looking after others, "To me," she said in a recent speech, "consensus is the process of abandoning all beliefs, principles, values and policies ... "

Not Only in Britain

On the Labor side, the lead role has swung to the ultra-Socialists under Anthony Wedgwood Benn, who favors unilateral disarmament, more nationalization of industry, higher wage settlements, protectionism and withdrawal from the European Community. He came within an ace of becoming deputy leader to Michael Foot at the party congress last month. He is now working at the grass roots to purge Labor members of Parlia-ment who voted against him. London Labor Briefing, the Bennite publication which printed the hit list, sounds like Thatcher on consensus. "Toleration," it said, "has been a much overworked word of late."

The void left at the center by Thatcher and Benn is being filled by a new party, the Social Democrats, who have allied them-selves with the Liberals. A score of members matic majority. They want the accisions made by this majority to control the policies of the World Bank, the International Mone-tary Fond and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The United States opposes giving the United Nations a central role in the global negotiations, insisting that the World Bank, the IMF and GATT, whose management reflects the economic, importance of the developed countries, should be kept as independent as possible of United Nations influence.

Common sense suggests a way of reconcil-ing these positions. The basic structures of the two Bretton Woods institutions — the bank and the IMF — and of GATT should not be changed: By ensuring that those who make economic commitments have an ap-propriate say in institutional management, se structures have made it possible to mobilize impressive financial resources onbehalf of developing countries and to clear away obstacles to their trade.

A Compromise

On the other hand, the division of voting rights agreed upon at the Bretton Woods conference 37 years ago needs continual ad-justment in the light of changing economic realities. There should be further increases in the voting power of Saudi Arabia and other OPEC members, in return for increased financial contributions. A modest increase in the voting rights of all develop-ing countries should be considered in order to enhance the credibility of the World Bank and the IMF in the Third World without

A compromise is also possible on the question of global negotiations in the United Nations. The United States is right in resisting demands to create a "new international economic order," as may be decided in the General Assembly by the Third World voting machine. But the developing needs a central forum where all economic questions can be discussed, their intertela-tionships examined, and trade-offs explored. Indeed, the United States and all member countries are committed by the UN Charter-to try to use the United Nations for this purpose. The problem is to ensure that the committee problem is to ensure that the organization serves its Charter aim of thermonizing the actions of nations" --- that is, serves as a place for resolving economic dif. lerences and not just as a place where these differences manifest themselves.

New Methods.

To make the United Nations a fit place for global negotiations, the methods of work of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council need to be revised.

Small pegotisting groups representative of member states' interests should be established for particular issues; they should be composed mainly of experts from capitals. and not manabers of United Nations missions, who are too often schooled in politics and rhetoric. An acknowledged authority in each field under negotiation should serve as full-time chairman of each group, with the job of working with key countries to find ed solutions.

In the absence of agreement, the General Assembly could vote anything it lined, as at present, but the defeated minority from whom concessions are domanded would be whom concessions are demanded would be under no obligation to change its ways. The World Bank, the IMF and GATT would re-tain the independence they now have. But when the new procedures produced agree-ments, ratified by the Assembly, the devel-oped and developing countries concerned would undertake to implement them in good faith through the World Bank, the IMF, GATT and other appropriate institutions. This compromise was unanimously agreed upon by a UN group of representa-tives of rich and poor countries appointed tives of nch and poor countries appointed by Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, in a 1975 report, "A New United Nations Struc-ture for Global Economic Cooperation." With appropriate updating and adapting, the compromise remains available for those who want to get on with the urgent business of striking North-South bargains in the common interest.

Whatever the scope of Gen. González del Yerro's activities, Spanish political sources contend that the message from the military is coming louder and clearer every day. The process of regional devolution is "unacceptable" if it continues as a threat of national "disintegration." Harsh sentences against the generals awaiting trial as alleged leaders of the February coup would be "unaccept-able," too. What about an eventual, and quite possible, success of the moderate So-cialist Party in the next general election? Doubtless "unacceptable."

Skillful Distorting

The same political sources say that highranking officers in the army request a strong, conservative government that would ensure that everything will be "acceptable." If this does not happen, the outcome could be violent, it is widely feared in Madrid.

With the social scene relatively calm and terrorism reduced to a trickle, there were

Reagan's Bolt From the Blue

President Reagan's shift from belligerent rhetoric to an offer to the U.S.S.R. of a mutual nuclear arms reduction has come as a bolt from the blue. It is a significant departure from the hawkish postures that the Reagan administration has so far adopted vis-à-vis Russia.

- From the National Herald (Delhi).

Mr. Reagan needed all this byperbole to sell his offer because it is neither straightforward nor historic in any sense. It is a bombastic propaganda stunt to blunt the increasing suspicion that Mr. Reagan's political and strategie foreign policies are becoming dangerous for the peace of the world.

- From the Patriot (Delhi).

The Collapse of the Arab Summit

Amid the bitterness overshadowing the Arab situation, the basic question remains whether the Arabs can really unite. This question becomes more difficult in the absence of Egypt from the Arab scene. Most observers say that Egypt, which has been the key to war and victory, would be the key to peace and Arab unity.

-From Al-Gomhouriya (Cairo).

The result is the worst news of all for the Palestinian people, who ever since the birth of Israel have paid dearly for the extremism and intrigue of the Arab radicals who deguidelines. Some economists believe they can't work. Given Mr. Reagan's vehement opposition, no one is likely to find out. Senator Gam's sympathy for the victims of tight credit is laudable. The Arab radicals can frustrate the Saudis, and the Jordanians, and would here like to frustrate the Egyptians, but they cannot deliver anything except what they have delivered in the past: bloodshed and futility.

- From The Times (London).

Bubbling beneath there is profound disquiet. The life of the present government can now be measured in months, if not weeks. And bovering in the wings, a brood-ing intangible presence, are the Spanish armed forces.

Spain reasonably well over the past six years begins to disintegrate, it is essential that Spaniards should start to realize that their governmental system has now left the apron strings of post-Francoism. They need to have the self-confidence to realize that their democracy rests not on a knife edge but on a broad plateau of public support.

Spain today has seldom in practice looked for it - fear, prolonged crisis, economic collapse, social breakdown - are not present. But if the unwanted specter is not to materialize, endless discussion of its imminence needs to be brought to a speedy close.

A Dutch Member of Parliament Asks for Better-Defined Security Policy

The campaign against nuclear weapons has been explained as an explosion of fear inspired by the unprecedented arsenals of destruction. Fear is certainly a contribut-ing factor. The invisible effects of nuclear energy and the difficult paradox of deterrence through horrible atomic weapons augment sense of insecurity

Yet I feel it wrong to ascribe the anti-nuclear campaign entirely 10 fear. In the Netherlands threefourths of the population remains in favor of NATO. The problem therefore comes down to a lack of prospects in the continuing buildup of nuclear weapons. The younger generation can only be kept ou board if the prospects become clearer than just a new spiral in the arms race.

The NATO ministers were aware of this mood when they took the double-track decision of December, 1979, for deploying the-ster nuclear weapons while negoti-ating with the Soviets. But they could have gone a step further to create a true incentive for moderation in arms programs. It would have been feasible to phase in Persing-2 and Cruise missiles in such a way as to decide firmly on a given number in re-sponse to the SS-20s already operational and to acquire the remainder only if and when the Soviet program would be further implemented. That would have introduced an element of reward for restraint. Instead, the 1979 decision provided Moscow with a stimulus to go for-ward with the SS-20 program as quickly as possible. Churchill's maxim "arm to par-ley" cannot be the whole story anymore. New arms decisions should be coupled with a clear position on the equilibrium they are expected to maintain. Otherwise the action-reaction pattern will go on unchecked.

Negotiations are bound to be long and complicated, and in the meantime arms programs run their course. An effort to link unilateral moves with performance on the other side might be a way to give the perspective to our security policy that our young people need.

Spiraling Threats The enthusiastic report of Presi-Intel first announced its mident Reagan's proposal for a "U.S.-Soviet Missile Slash in Europe" (IHT, Nov. 19) needs comment. Whereas the new proposal demands a withdrawal of existing Soviet medium-range missiles, it offers only a slashing of planued positioning of U.S. Cruise and Pershing missiles. The asymmetry here is obvious: You think up something terrible, then offer not to carry it out in trade for some real reductions on the Soviet side. What worries me is that this ap proach by the United States could usher in a new spiral of threats from both sides. The logic of the U.S. proposal rests on belligerency in foreign policy; it is not very likely to result in fruitful arms re-IAN MCKELLED.

The Anti-Tourist's Pocket Guide to Going Native

by Paul Fussell

EW YORK --- It is hard to be a snob and a tourist at the same time. A way to combine both roles is to become an anti-tourist. Despite the suffering he undergoes, the anti-tourist is not to be confused with the traveler: His motive is not inquiry but self-protection and vanity.

but self-protection and vanity. Dean MacCannell, author of the anthropological study "The Tourist," remembers a resident of an island like Nantucket who remonstrated when, arriving, MacCannell offered to start the car before the ferry docked. "Only tourists do that," he was told. Abroad, the techniques practiced by anti-tourists anxious to assert their difference from all those tourists are more shifty. All involve attempts to merge into the surroundings, like speaking the language, even badly. Some dissimulations are merely mechanical, like a man's shifting his wedding ring from the left to the right hand. A useful trick is ostenta-tiously not carrying a camera. If asked about this deficiency by a cam-totally not carrying a camera. If asked about this denciency by a cam-era-carrying tourist, one scores points by saying, "I never carry a camera. If I photograph things I find I don't really see them." Another device is staying in the most unlikely hotels, although this is risky, like the correlative technique of eschewing taxis in favor of local public transportation (the more complicated and confusing the better), which may end with the anti-tourist stranded miles out of town, cold and alorse or the last taxes of the pilet. alone on the last tram of the night.

Another risky technique is programmatically consuming the local food, no matter how nasty, and affecting to relish sheeps' eyes, fried cicadas and shellfish taken locally, that is, from the sewagey little lagoon. Dressing with attention to local coloration used to be harder before jeans became the international costume of the pseudo-leisured. But jeans are hard for those around 60 to get away with, and the anti-tourist must be careful to prevent betrayal by jackets, trousers, shoes and even socks and neckiles (if still worn) differing subtly from the local norms.

Sedulously avoiding the standard sights is probably the best method of disguising your touristhood. In London one avoids Westminster Ab-bey and heads instead for the Earl of Burlington's 18th-century villa at Chiswick. In Venice one must walk by circuitons smelly back passages far out of one's way to avoid being seen in the Piazza San Marco. In Athens, one distains the Acropolis in favor of the eminence preferred by the locals the I webettue.

the locals, the Lycabettus. Each tourist center has its interdicted zone: In Rome you avoid the Spanish Steps and the Fontana di Trevi, in Paris Les Deux Magous and spanish steps and the Fontana of Free, in Fans Les Dent Magnis and the whole Boal' Mich area, in Nice the Promenade des Anglais, in Egypt Gize with its excessively popular pyramids and sphinx, in Hawaii Walki-ki. Avoiding Walkiki brings up the whole question of why one's gone to Hawaii at all, but that's exactly the problem. Driving on the Continent, it's essential to avoid outright gives ways like the French TT license plate. Better to drive a car registered in the country you're touring (the more suave rental agencies know this) if you can't find one from some unlikely place like Bulgaria or Syria. Plates entirely in Arabic are currently much favored by anti-tourists, and they have the additional advantage of frustrating policemen writing tickets for illegal parking, Perhaps the most popular way for the anti-tourist to demarcate him-elf from the tourists, because he can have a drink while doing it, is for him to loange — cameraless — at a cafe table and with palpable con-tempt scrutinize the passing sheep through half-closed lids, making all movements very slowly. Here the costume providing the least danger of exposure is jeans, a thick dark-colored turtleneck and longish hair. Any conversational gambits favored by lonely tourists, like "Where are you from?" can by deflected by vagueness. Instead of answering Des Momes or Queens, you say, "I spend a lot of time abroad" or "That's really hard to say." If hard-pressed, you simply mutter "Je oc parle pas Anglais," look at your watch and leave.

The anti-tourist's persuasion that he is really a traveler instead of a tourist is both a symptom and a cause of what the British journalist Alan Brien has designated tourist argst, defined as "a gnawing suspicion that after all ... you are still a tourist like every other tourist."

As a uniquely modern form of self-contempt, tourist angst often issues in bizarre emotional behavior, and it is supprising that it has oot yet become a classic for psychiatric study. "A student of mine in Paris," writes MacCannell, "a young man from Iran dedicated to the [student] revolution, half stammering, half shorting, said to me. 'Let's face it, we are all tourists!' Then, rising to his feet, his face cootorted with....self-hared, he concluded dramatically in a hiss: 'Even I am a tourist.'"

Tourist angur like this is distinctly a class signal. Only the upper ele-ments of the middle class suffer from it, and in summer especially it is endemic in places like Florence and Mykonos and Crete. It is rare in pseudo-places like Disneyland, where people have come just because other people have come. This is to say that the working class finds nothing shameful about tourism. It is the middle class that has read and heard just enough to sense that being a tourist is somehow offensive and scorned by an imagined upper class that it hopes to emulate and, if possible, be mistaken for.

The irony is that extremes meet: The upper class, unruffled by con-tempt from any source, happily enrolls in Lindblad Tours or makes its way up the Nile in tight groups being lectured at by a tour guide artfully disguised as an Oxhridge archaeologist. Sometimes the anti-tourist's rage to escape the appearance of tourism propels him around a mock-full-circle, back to a simulacrum of exploratioo. Hence the popularity of African safaris among the upper-middle class. One tourist agency oow offers package exploristic expeditions to Everest and the Sahara and to Sinai by camel caravan, "real expeditions for the serious traveler looking for more than an adventurous vacauon." Something of the acute discomfort of exploration and the uncertainty of real travel can be recovered by accepting an invitation to "Traverse Spain's Sierra Nevada on horsehack ($528)."

But the anu-tourist deludes only himself. We are all tourists now, and there is no escape. Every year there are over two hundred million of us, and when we are jetted in all directions and todged in our pseudo-places, we constitute four times the population of France.

The decisions we imagine ourselves making are shaped by the Profes-sor of Tourism at Michigan State University and by the "Travel Ad-ministrators" now being trained at the New School in New York and by the International Union of Official Travel Organizations, whose publications indicate what it has in mind for us: "Factors Determining Selection of Sites for Tourism Development," for example, or "Potential International Supply of Tourism Resources."

Our freedom and mobility diminish at the same time their expansion is loudly proclaimed; while more choices appear to solicit us, fewer actually do. The ships will not come back to the Hudson, and some places in Guyana will doubtless be selected as a site for tourism development. The tourist is locked in, and as MacCannell has pointed out, as a type the tourist is "one of the best models of modern man-in-general " taxes you on the value of a used car and not on the price you paid for it new; or if you sell the car before returning home.

The savings can be attractive if you live in a country that taxes cars beavily. In England, it's 25 percent of the cost of the car. In France, it's 33 percent. In Belgium it's 25 percent or 30 percent for a larger-sized luxury car. In West Germany, it's 13 percent and a non-resident pays the tax, which is refunded when he leaves. In Spain, it's 20 percent for a Spanish-made car and a hefty 70 percent tax for a foreign-other countries, similar consumer associations can be helpful.

A key factor in most cases is the length of time that a new owner can drive the car on temporary plates in the country of purchase before importing it in the country where the customs duty and registration fees must finally be paid.

The duration of a temporary registration is often determined by the purchaser's status. An executive on temporary assignment may be eli-gible for a long period that allows for considerable depreciation in the car's value. Different countries have different time limits. A tourist registering a car in France with tourist plates is allowed to use them for six months. A journalist or a student (who is not earning a salary) may keep the French "TT plates for up to two years providing the car is not sold in the meantime and providing French customs is paid a 15 percent deposit, refundable on departure. In Switzerland, you can get a temporary tourist registration for as long as three years if you aren't a resident of Switzerland. In Italy, England and Spain, tourist plates are good for a year.

But check the rules: in some countries, customs officials start counting the time your plates will be legal starting with your date of arrival and not with the purchase of your car.

Pierre Cardin at Maxim's, part of his empire.

What Cardin Is Cooking Up For Maxim's

by Hebe Dorsey

ARIS - Pierre Cardin is an immense ly successful man so it sort of follows that he is also immensely criticized. But that does not faze him. "I'm used to being criticized," he says. " Every time 1 do something new, people tear me apart, then they do exactly what I do." For proof, he was the first noted designer in ready-to-wear, as far back as 1959 --- a revolutionary move that got him expelled from the Chambre Syndicale de la Couture Parisienne.

His empire, nobody can quite ascertain. "All I know is that it's gigantic," is as much as he will say. Figures range between $400 million and several billion for Cardin, 59, now known as the king of the license business. He has put his name on more than 600 products — rang-ing from furniture to chocolates — distributed through 540 factories and a 120,000-man workforce in 80 countries, including, as of last weekend with much fanlare, China. A frustrat-ed theater man (he opened his own couture house in 1950 with theater costumes), he also owns his own theater, L'Espace Cardin in Par-

In 1979, he started the Maxim's license business, owning a controlling interest in the or-ganization that allows the use of the restaurant's name. That was promptly followed by the acquisition of 27 percent of Maxim's res-taurant, a temple to Belle Epoque architecture and naughtiness. But Cardin did not simply buy a gastronomic landmark; he is busy putting it to use and turning it ioto a highly profit-able product. If he has his way, the magic name will soon be over everything from a delicatessen to hotels and restaurants, including those now in Tokyo and Mexico City and others planned in Singapore and Brussels. In 1983 a vost U.S. plan includes new Maxim's restaurants in New York and Los Angeles and the reopening of the one in Chicago. A man who started as a humhle tailor, operating from a fifth-floor walkup near the Paris Opera, the Venetian-born Cardin has come a long way. He has, for example, all but cornered the Elysée Palace. His fashion house is on avenue Marigny, sext to the mansion the Rothschilds sold to the French government to house official guests. On the rue du Faubourg Saint Honore, almost directly across from the Elysee's entrance, is the first stone of the Maxim's edifice, a delicatessen that sells pickles and caviar plus the Maxim's ashtrays tourists constantly steal - the ashtrays cost 30 francs here. Across from the store, another corner building is devoted to Maxim's Homme de la Nutt, or evening clothes. Around the corner is Maxim's Fruits.

Now, on rue Royale, next to the restaurant, there is Maxim's Fleurs, a flower shop where Art Nouveau vases are filled with white orchids at $40 a stem. Cardin owns not only the shop but the whole huilding. The trouble is, not too many people are seen in all those fancy stores, which has led people to ask: Is it for real and what's behind it all?

to ask: is it for real and what's behind it all? Some offer the theory that Cardin bought Maxim's to upgrade his own label, which, they say, was suffering from overexposure. Others argue that Cardin is cheapening Maxim's with commercial operations, including dinner par-ties during which be shows his collections. Others still, stunned by the oumber of build-ings Cardin has his name on card that Marine's ings Cardin has his name on, say that Maxim's is all camouflage for a real-estate operation.

Cardin, super-designer turned super-busi

First, he insists he has no problems with his own label. "On the contrary," he says from his fashion house, which is so tumultious that be cannot seem to find an office for himself. The Pierre Cardin label has never been stronger. That's how I've been able to buy Maxim's. The reason I took on Maxim's is because I was mesmerized by its image." No great gournet, Cardin was probably not upset that the restaurant is no longer in the Guide Michelin — at the request of the former owner. The reason reportedly was that he was afraid to lose one of his three stars despite a metitize of heart with the stars. tradition of haute cuisine such as duck with peaches (which has now become, in a bow to nouvelle cuisine, duck with raspberry vinegar) and rack of lamh Maria Callas (on request). Instead, Cardin saw the potential of the Maxim's name and knew exactly how to exploit it.

For Maxim's lovers, it was a major turn the former owners, Louis and Maggy Vaudable, were aging, as was, indeed, the restaurant it-self. There is little chance that Maxim's can long survive with the same clubby standards people are still turned away at the door if the maitre d'hotel, the ineffable Roger, does not like the way they are dressed. In a reflection of the fife way incy are dressed. In a relation of the economic situation, Roger admits that while the dinner hour is still all right, there is less booking at lunch in these days when ex-pense accounts are coming under increasing government scrutiny and taxation. By making the restaurant commercially viable, Cardin is the restaurant commerciany visce, Cardin is able to keep it going. Besides spreading Maxim's name all over the map, Cardin is also busy restoring the res-taurant but always, he points out, with the agreement of the aesthetic authorities, for the place is a classified monument. "All I'm trying a do it with Maxim's unbartie" he care to do is make Maxim's authentic," he says, "For, past the Art Nouveau restaurant, all the 11 15 011 cent. The tax on cars is, of course, subject to change.

A non-resident huying a car can avoid these charges by obtaining a temporary registration. Ask the auto manufacturer or dealer if be can arrange to get tourist registration and plates for you; if the manufacturer or dealer cannot help and there is trouble finding the police or customs officials, the embassy or consulate of your own country can point you in the right direction.

You'll have to show your passport and, most likely, proof that you're a visitor (a return air-line ticket can help) with a permanent residence elsewhere. It's residence and not citizen-ship that counts. You might be an Italian citizen but if you live in another country, you can buy a car in Italy tax-free with tourist plates.

What you save hy registering in tourist plates as a non-resident doesn't matter so much as what you do next with the car you just bought. Someone living in England could save 13 percent tax by buying a car in West Germany but, if he takes it home, he might wind up paying his country's 25 percent tax on it. When you take your foreign-bought car home and face customs officials there, there are basically three possibilities. Perhaps you will have used your car to such an extent that you won't be required to pay tax or duty bevond the normal registration fee. In that case you will have, in fact, gotten a tax-free car. A more likely contingency, however, is you'll be paying taxes on the value of your car at the time you cross the border. As a result you would still be saving money by paying tax-es oo a used and not a oew car, with allowances made for mileage and condition. But, again, it's best to check the rules in your country. For example, as of July, 1980, anyone bringing a foreign-made car into the United States must pay a duty based on the transaction value of the car. This means that, even if you've been driving your car around Europe for three years, you'll pay taxes on the invoice price without any discount for the condition of the Car.

The third possibility is that you resell the car. If you sell your car before you return home the person who buys it may have to pay taxes on it unless he, too, is a non-resident.

Obviously, since laws vary, it's best to get advice in both the country in which you are buying the car as well as in the country where you will eventually register it. For example, residents of Britain, who can obtain substantial savings hy buying cars in other Common Market countries, can receive a detailed kit of advice by sending a large stamped, addressed envelope to Action Cars, Consumers' Asocia-tion, 1 Caxton Hill, Hertford, England. In

In certain cases, you can extend expired tourist registration by going to another coun-try. But that depends on where you've been registered and where you're going. In any case, you're not allowed to return to a country where your tourist registration has expired without paying taxes.

All taxes aside, the regulations in your coun-try may very well require that your foreign car conform to certain safety standards. This is important because you won't be allowed to bring it home unless those specifications are met. It's best to tell your car dealer where you eventually intend taking your car so he can sell you a model that will meet the standards of your country.

Better yet, check with your country's embassy to make sure you know the specifications yourself before ordering the car. For example, French cars usually need yellow headlights. Scandinavian cars may have to be equipped with special seat belts and white lights. In the United States, cars must meet emission-cootrol regulations as well as safety standards.

Searching for the Raw Materials of Sushi in Tokyo

by Joel Stratte-McClure

OKYO — Spend a morning at the world's largest fish market with sushi chef Isao Yamanaka and you're excused for wondering if the Japanese live on raw fish alone. Yamanaka, one of an estimated 350,000 sushi chefs in Japan, has been in the business of tasting, preparing and serving raw fisb for 30 years. The sprawling sen-smelling market off Harumi Street is his laboratory and he uses all of his senses to evaluate and select the most delectable fish in Tokva.

"Raw fish straight from the sea is the ulfi-"Raw fish straight from the sea is the ull-mate natural and nutritional food." Yamanaka says as he gently pinches a bit of blood-red tuna canght yesterday off Hokkaido and sell-ing today for 15,000 yen (about $70) a kilo. "The reason the Japanese are so fond of raw fish is that we can be sure it is fresh fish."

Wholesalers and chefs brave a pre-dawn traffic jam to shop compensively for an overwhelming variety of fish at the Tokyo market between 4 a.m. and noon. The fish have ar-rived by ship, rail and truck and are being eyed by a multitude of buyers wearing knee-high rubber boots and determining precise weights with digital scales. Most of the fish - whale, runa, squid and crab, for example - come from Japanese waters, but there are imports from around the world - lobster from South Africa, salmon from Alaska, shrimp from Colombia, eel from Taiwan and berring from Canada. The fish, if not fresh, are frozen, salted or on ice.

Yamanaka eyes the frozen fish with disdain but tenderly evaluates about 30 kinds of fresh fish he will use in today's sushi, a dish of morsels of raw fish placed on compacted mounds of vinegared rice. Yamanaka refuses to ac- of seven types of fish and then artfully prepare knowledge the existence of refrigeration. He it by placing each piece on a hall of rice. The gleefully dips his arm into an aerated tank and catches a salmon, pokes at an unsuspecting sea urchin, plays with the tentacles of an octopus and punches the tough skin of an abalone. Oc-casionally he will take a bit of tuna or pop some salmon roe into his mouth.

"I must make sure that we get the best for today's sushi and that requires precisely the right purchases," Yamanaka says as he hands

Nakajima Marine to do his purchasing the rest of the time, he insists on an intimate relationship with his fish and their suppliers. Recently he visited Hiroshima to sample the season's fare and assure the fishermen that someone is carefully monitoring their efforts. He dismisses the environmental uproar concerning the whale, doesn't mind the Japanese reputation for occasionally fishing in forbidden waters and seems solely concerned with getting his customers the best fish on the market. Some observers think Yamanaka and his if are observers think Yamanaka and his ilk are "The Swedes and French occasionally est

"They eat it for every meal, have made the presentation an art form and their fish markets tre expensive but excellent."

Turnover at the Tokyo market is estimated at $500,000 a day and a portion of the sales is destined for the 9,700 such restaurants in Totyo. Yamanaka's purchases, which be makes during a half-hour tour of the colorful stalls and pavilions, will be delivered to his small kitchen at the Hilton Hotel at 10 a.m. and the whale meat will be thinly sliced, the shellfish shelled and the abalone cleaned. Today's choice also included squid, salmon roe, flatfish, eel and octopus, but Yamanaka is particularly proud of the fine tuna and whale meat.

Some of the shellfish is wrapped in seaweed and he prepares tasty tidbits for hors d'oeuvres - mushrooms in soya sauce and other vegetahles with ginger. Yamanaka and his assistant, Ryuhei Segewa, who was an apprentice for 10 years, are professionals at preparing sushi and, if pressed, can make up a plate in about a minute. They let the customer choose a minimum

"The Japanese also tend to smother the fish with a strong taste like borseradish and know very little about the necessity of a light, subtle sauce." Yamanaka is not worried about the critique. Although sushi is becoming expensive due to current prices, he seems pleased that you don't have to be a gourmet to eat raw fish.

"Raw fish is a food for common people and can be eaten at any time," he says while ex-plaining that sake, beer or white wine can ac-company a sushi meal. "You do not have to be French or a professional cater to appreciate the exquisite taste."

Health Warning On Nouvelle Cuisine

EW YORK - An "exotic" spice that is being gobiled up by fans of nouvelle cuisine is nothing more than a common weed related to poison ivy and is capable of causing severe toxic reactions, according to botanical experts,

The spice, variously known as pink, or red, peppercorns and Baies Roses de Bourbon, has been said 10 grow only oo the French island of Reunion, off Madagascar. The peppercorns are prized by restaurateurs and gournet shoppers for their slightly sweet, stingless flavor and color.

But - according to persistent detective work by Sandy Hieks, herb consultant for the University of Michigan - the mysterious berries are nothing hut the fruit of a common weed, Schinus terebinthifolius, better known as Brazilian pepper or Florida holly. The aggressive plant, once prized as an ornament, is now a pest in tropical areas all over the world, including Florida

Dr. Julia Morton, director of the University of Miami's Morton Collectanea, who assisted in identifying the berries, developed a sore throat, tightness in her chest and hoarseness soon after tasting a few. Her thick file of adverse human and animal reactions to Brazilian peppers (leaves and flowers, as well as fruit) include painful rashes, asthma-like attacks and internal poison ivy - upset stomach, diarrhea and hemorrhoids. A scientist at the National Institutes of Health was forced to stop working with the berries when she developed violent headaches, swollen eyelids, shortness of breath and chest pains.

Indeed, the hazards of Brazilian peopercorns have been known at least since 1786, when a Peruvian scientist described their ability to cause "terrible hemorrhoids." The numbers of berries required to cause adverse effects is not known. But the experts advise din-ers to steer clear of foods adorned with tiny red spheres of unknown identity. ©1981 The New York Times out style. I want the whole house to be an ensemble, with authentic furniture, engravings and paintings." An avid Art Nouveau collector. Cardin, who has a stall in the Paris flea market working almost solely for him, already has a head start.

The bar on the first floor is being changed back to its original, curlicued Art Nouveau style. Downstairs. Cardin's major and most interesting work is the restoration of a little theater that once was where the stage, with an com-pah-pah orchestra, is now. In the restanrant's earlier and humbler days, that theater was used by, among others, Mistinguett and Maurice Chevalier.

Cardin will renew that houlevard café tradition on Dec. 6 when he will bring in the opera soprano Kiri Te Kanawa to sing "The Merry Widow" at a semi-private evening. Things, however, will not be quite the same as in Belle Epoque days, as it will be not a black-tie affair hut a buffet dinner - Sunday and Socialism ohlige. But Cardin does not intend to have only period pieces; his idea is to hring in varied international talent - he drops the name of Barbra Streisand.

The kitchens, too, are being moved from the basement to the second floor. "I had no choice," Cardin says, "those people were work-ing in dreadful, 19th-century conditions."

To top his edifice, Cardin, who can never be faulted for his sense of promotion, is adding to Maxim's what he calls a "Chambre d'Amour - an authentic Art Nouveau suite at $1,000 a night. "It's a gag, a petite folie," Cardin admits. "It's not a revival of the cabinet particulier tradition" - referring to those private rooms in turn-of-the-century Parisian restaurants where the door did not open from the outside.

People have been saying that Cardin is turning Maxim's into a museum and that, gradual-ly, the restaurant will decline — if it has not dooe so already. "Not at all," Cardin says. "The food has not changed and will not. I'm not a restaurateur, and I don't see why I should meddle with something that's doing fine "

For a hot-shot skier whose only problem may be high boots that hurt, Raichle's new Flexon ski boot with a supple tongue for leaning forward painlessly is the answer. They cost 280 francs at any of the Placette department stores in French-speaking Switzerland. And for skiers and sailors, a handhlown glass wall barometer made from Saanen glass, operating with water and guaranteed to overflow when the weather looks bad, is 49 francs at Art Suisse, Lausanne.

More Saanen glass in the form of carafes. hand-engraved to enhance their delicacy, are 59 francs at Art Suisse, Lausanne, and Christmas tree balls that won't bounce are 36 francs at the Heimatwerk, Berne. Walkers will appreciate antique walking sticks from Galerie Michele Zeller, 20 Kram-gasse, Berne (tel: 031/22.23.54). They start at 100 francs. Pewter is more precious to the Swiss than silver (perhaps because it doesn't need polishing). Carafes in this metal, known as Channes and available in regional styles, can be bought reasonably throughout Switzerland at the Migros chain, starting at 59 francs.

Used for ladling thick Gruyere cream and pretty enough to decorate a cupboard, handcarved wooden spoons from Le Pays d'en Haut start at 22 francs at Art Suisse, Lausanne. Antique ones can be found for a bit more at Ida Krater, 55 Kramgasse, Berne (tel: 031/22.61.09), along with old hutter molds 140 francs).

Still in wood, handcarved wooden creche figures (the males look a bit like William Tell) can be bought for all prices at Heimatwerk, Berne. A nice idea would be to add a figure a

The delicate art of decoupage, representing Swiss country scenes, is a good investment gift. Art Suisse as well as Heimatwerk represent various artists. Prices range from 100 to 500 francs depending on size and design intricacy - one slip of the scissors and the artist has to start another work. A whole year of the work of the well-known decoupage artist Anna Ro-sat can be offered with the Anna Rosat 1982 Calendar, 19.80 francs at most stationery stores

Cloth-covered cookbooks of Swiss regional recipes from Basel, central Switzerland, Zurich and French-speaking Switzerland, printed on "old" paper, can be picked up for a gastro-nome at Cardas, rue de Bourg, Lausanne (tel: 021/22.55.60), at 26.80 francs a volume. More in books: "L'Histoire Suisse" in comics, to give to someone who is boning up on Swiss history for the passport exam, costs 15 francs at La Joie de Lire, 38 place Bourg de Four, Geneva (tel: 022/29.35.65). For children, "Les Deux Isles," by two Biennois who spent four years building models for their accurate illustrations and writing a text that pils good against evil in ancient times; 29.80 at Payot, rue de Bourg, Lausanne (tel: 021/20.33.31). And espionage devotees might go for "The Swiss Corridor," by Jozef Garlinski, a Polish historian who based this intriguing account of Swiss intelligence on the World War II networks, "The Red Orchestra" and "The Black Orchestra." It costs 48 francs at Payot.

In the old city of Geneva, rue Hotel de Ville, and in Berne on the Kramgasse there are several antique shops where old prints of Switzerland framed in gold leaf can be bought at pric-es ranging from 300 to 900 francs.

Nostalgia can also be bought at Franz Carl Weber, the toy shop that has hranches all over Switzerland, in the form of "old" jass cards (the national card game of Switzerland) for 12,90 francs, puzzles in numbered, limited editions (29.90 francs), a reprint of an old image book (7.90 francs) and the 1891 game, "Voy-age en Suisse," (39.90 francs). Children will also like Kinderpost, which daplicates the Swiss PTT right down to miniature stamps, coins and payment slips. Also at Weber, 19.80 francs. And for artists of all ages, the Swiss crayon wizard Caran d'Ache, has come out with Flhralo #2, a metal box of soft colors that diffuse when moistened: 10 francs at most stationery stores.

Men who like to lather their cheeks with hristles will go for fluffy, high-mountain badger hrushes from H. Aeschbacher, 7 Marketgasse, Berne (tel: 031/22.28.44), starting at

by Mary Peirson Kennedy

ARCELONA - Aurora Altisent was so intrigued by the ancient, un-changed small shops that dot this city that she sketched 26 of them down to the last detail. The result is "Botiques de Barcelona," as her book is called in Catalan. While the text is also in the language of this region of Spain, the artwork can be understood by everyone.

The drawings include an herb shop, a pharmacy, a hardware store and the shops of makers of tomhstones, bells and glass, all with street addresses. This book can be found at most of the bigger bookstores, hut for sure at the Mirador, Mountaner 281 (tel: 209.45.08). The price is 650 pesetas (about $6.80). Walk-ing around the older sections of the city with the book as a guide, one also comes across many of the interesting stores in Barcelona not in this book.

In these old sections the streets are often named after the products that were sold there, From Altisent's drawings it is easy to recog-nize the glassware shop at No. 6 Calle Vidrier-ia (Glassware Street) (tel: 319.40.46), where the great-granddaughter of Juan Grau sells bottles in the form of a dog, a rose or a hand that are made from the same molds that were used when her great-grandfather founded the shop in the early 1800s. These and other machine-etched bottles come in green, lavender, brown and clear glass and range in price from 700 to 850 pesetas. They make an impressive window display when they catch the light of the sun. There are also several pieces of hand-etched glassware, like the huge wine glasses that hold more than a half-liter of liquid and could be used as vases. They sell for 2,500 pesetas.

Calle Vidrieria runs into Calle Montcada, too narrow for much traffic but fine for pedes ones. The masks and figures range from 950 to 5,500 pesetas. And one more item in this store: huge paper cutouts of Barcelona's historic buildings. cate but rewarding work for adults and chil-dren, and the finished product, priced at 350 to 500 pesetas, is a work of art. For the lover of rustic pottery, Seuva, at No. 3 Calle Giralt Pellicer (tel: 319.92.69), has primitive glazed pots made in nearby Gerona that range from 40 pesetas for the smallest to 970 for the largest. The pots are ovenproof and few Barcelona kitchens are without them.

Still in the old part of the city, one passes into the Barrio Gotica and at No. 1 Calle Corders (tel: 319.07.56), as faithfully repro-duced in Altisent's book, there is a bell shop whose owner explains that this is the only bellmaker left in Catalonia and that the shop existed as far back as 1723. Here you can buy a hand-cast, 12-centimeter-high bronze bell (with a bit of pewter for the tone quality) for 2,000 pesetas or a 34-centimeter church bell for 55,000 pesetas. Or a tinkling brass tea bell for 350 pesetas.

Bordering the port, down by the central post office at No. 28 calle Ample, the House of Maggi, as sketched by the artist, is an oasis of tranquility (probably some would call it an anachronism) where little has changed since its opening in 1834. "People aren't interested in tinware any more," the two aging Maggi brothers explain, as they look sadly around their dwindling stock of lamps, baking and cooking ware, milk and oil cans — all put to-gether partly by machine, partly by hand. The delicate designs of their six-sided hanging lamps (they have to be wired), which cost 1,250 pescias, make them one of several quile special items. And if there is an electric failure in the area, remember the Maggi brothers: They have a full stock of kerosene lamps at 900 pesetas each. They do not have a tele-

Artful Living in a French Village

by Jules B. Farber

ACOSTE, France - Perched atop a steep bill just under the ruins of the Marquis de Sade's chateau in the Vaucluse area, 25 miles from Avig-non, the village of Lacoste bouses one of Europe's most picturesque and offbeat campuses. Lacoste is now celebrating the 10th anniver-sury of its "Art in France" studies, initiated by the American painter Bernard Pfriem, sup-ported by Sarah Lawrence College and, this year for the first time, the Cleveland Institute of Art. The fall semester, which runs through Dec. 16, has hought to Lacoste — girded by medieval stone ramparts and classified by the French government as a bistoric monument -40 students ranging in age from 16 to 73 from the United States, Japan, China, Italy and France, Pfriem, a Cleveland-born artist, guides what he calls a "mini-university" offering courses in poetry, drama, French language and art histo-ry as well as workshop classes in sculpture, stone carving, painting, printmaking, drawing and photography. Also available is a course called "The Self in Art and Nature," an exami-

"We go further with the humanities than any other American-sponsored art program in Europe," boasts the 63-year-old Pfriem. Be-sides his duties as an administrator and faculty Supervisor, he gives drawing and pointing her. supervisor, he gives drawing and painting les-sons, scouts for guest lecturers and even checks that the chef, who is also the village mayor, serves well-balanced meals in the t2th-century chapel used as the dining room. The school is situated among houses on the car-free dirt ramp that winds up from the low-er village. Student dormitories are in an an-cient bakery and several 17th-century houses, studios and workshops function in a maze of old buildings. Models pose for art and sculprure classes in nearby quarries, including the one that supplied the stone for de Sade's chateau, starting in the 11th century. Some lectures are given on expansive terraces overlook-ing the valley with vistas as far as Mont Ven-

Students, undergraduates as well as graduates, can attend with or without credit. For those wanting college credits, the Lacoste fall curriculum, for example, offers 15 semester hours with the program weighted two-thirds in the studio arts, one-third in art history, Freneb language and biterature. Majors can be selected in either area - studio or bumanities. Travel costs and room and board total $3,700 for the 13-week semester. As a Sarah Lawrence student said in evaluating the summer term: "The structuring of the days - one studio art class per day, with academic work around dinner time and regular Saturday excursions greatly helped me lose the sense of 'school' and feel I was practicing art as an integral part of daily living." The Lacoste faculty of teachers and practicing artists is selected by the sponsoring institu-tion, which administers the program, processes applications and advances the finances. Visitors to Pfriem's enclave have included Man tors to Pfinem's enclave have included Man Ray and Max Ernst, both of whom lived near-hy. Henri Cartier-Bresson, who also resides in the region, comes along. Master photographers Ernst Hzas, Gjon Mili and David Douglas Duncan have given slide presentations. Peter De Francia, the chairman of the painting de-partiment at incoder's Rural Callers of Art in partment at London's Royal College of Art, is a regular art history lecturer at Lacoste. And Andre Bouer, owner of the Marquis de Prof Sade's chateau, is always on hand for the orientation sessions.

Pfriem remains Lacoste's spiritual spark-plug. He lives and works in a New York loft from Jan. 15 through May 15, spending the rest of the year in France. He recalls how the school began: "I discovered this village in 1950 while I was on the GI bill doing postgraduate studies in Paris. There was an abandoned house for sale at $50.1 offered a $5 down payment, all I had in cash. The owner was affronted. He said it was a question of honor — his word and mine. He held the house until I word and mine, he had the house that a could raise the money." He later bought the ruin next to it for $10. Then he took a job as the Marshall Plan's chief designer, immediately asking for an advance of $1,000 to cover his loans and start repovations. Soon after, a three-level house came to auction that he managed to buy by leaving a $35 bid with the Communist mayor. Afterward the old bakery with the original stone oven came up. It cost $200 to buy that and move the people out. "I was collecting property," Pfriem recalls, "with the idea of creating an unusual art school in this unique situation for communal living and a spirit of sharing." Pfriem is justifiably delighted with the dec-ade's accomplishments. "Lacoste took us to its heart. We support the village's two cafes, gro-cery, bakery and gas station. Locals look up the hills to us as their cultural center. They come to every exhibition, drama presentation, open bouse and scheduled event. We've become the town's number one industry. It used to be stone quarrying, followed by silkworm production and then mulberry leaves for feedng the silk worms. Now it's art."

ARIS --- Things are moving fast on the Art Deco scene. Until last scason, competing for top-quality furniture and objets d'art of the 1920s was a pastime for trendy millionaires closely connected with the world of high fashion and design. This month, various events bave demonstrated that Art Deco has won recognition in much wider circles.

The art market

The most spectacular indication was provided on Nov. 15 at a suhurban sale held at Enghien, on the outskirts of Paris, by the Champin-Lombrail auctioneering group. A macassar-ebony desk designed by Emile Jacques Rnhlmann around 1930, sold with a swivel chair and five macassar chairs made en suite to match the desk, rose to a phenomenal 935,570 francs (about $166,500). Ont of this total, the desk may be conservatively reckoned to accouot for 700,000 francs. In May, 1980, that same desk was knocked down at one of Sotheby's most brilliant sales of the year, at Monte Carlo, for 464,200 francs.

True, there is quite a story to that desk Once it adorned the palace of a modern-mind-ed Indian maharaja who had commissioned a famous German architect of the Bauhaus school, Hermann Muthesius, to build the palace and have it furnished in avant-garde taste. There, the whole lot was spotted by European antique bunters. A dealer in contemporary art, Mario Tazzoli, acquired it and, after unsuc-cessfully approaching several likely buyers, consigned it for sale to Sotheby's. Such tactics are usually fatal to the greatest objets d'art. When Sotheby's sale turned into a delirious triumph. it looked like a miracle.

This month, the Ruhlmann desk sale was far more of a miracle: Anybody who matters in Art Deco was aware that the desk had been sold recently — and for how much. To sell a piece against such crippling odds seemed impossible Part of the success must be credited to the auction-bouse expert, Felix Marcilhac, a lead-ing Paris dealer in the field. Marcilhac has the World Who's Who of Art Deco at his finger tips and managed to draw to this obscure place buyers from all over the world, including the United States. As a result, the contest for the desk was fought in its final stages between a French film producer and a New York pop music producer who wanted it for his top-floor office at Rockefeller Center.

The winner was the Frenchman. That is what makes the Enghien auction so significant. Private buyers in this country are conservative; il takes literally generations for them to accept a new field. They have oow recognized Art Deco and sooner or later its best pieces are likely to reach financial parity with the best of 18th-ceotury furniture, which is still six or seveo times more expensive. This has already happeoed as far as objets This has already happeoed as far as objets d'art are concerned. At a sale conducted this week by Raymond de Nicolaÿ, assisted by Marcilhac, a smoked-glass clock of dark amber hue by Renè Lalique was sold for 50,070 francs. Two nude silhouettes molded around the clock in the glass disk are bandled in the academic style of the 1930s. The price is precisely that which had been quoted by the expert before the sale and is ool unusual these days; it is roughly the same as that of an 18th-century clock of comparable quality. The next stage can already be forecast: It will be the promotion of what I call Second Generation Art Deco, i.e. the design of the 1936-1940 period, with a follow-up on the style of the 1950s. The experiment made by auctioneer Chris-tiane Juthean at Drouot this week shows, however, that this will not be all plain sailing. A longtime friend of the Lelen family, Juthean thought it a good idea to huild up a sale covering the entire range of the Leleu firm produc-tion, which started in 1918 and stopped in 1976

Jules Leleu, the soo of a small industrialist from Boulogne-sur-Mer who manufactured paint and had a sideline in interior decoration, initiated the firm's large-scale involvement in furniture making. He took an active part in the Art Deco movement and had a large stand at the famous 1925 exhibition held at the Musee des Arts Decoratifs. His style, however, was derivative and low-keyed. On Tuesday, it elicited no wild enthusiasm.

An amboyna-burr stool in the sale, designed after an African model via the much bolder interpretation of his contemporary Pierre Legrain, was dainty, almost affected with its unnecessarily sinuons line. It made 24,770 francs. Other pieces looked like remakes of Ruhlmann's furniture --- a walnut-burr writing desk of 1928, for example, sold for 28,070 francs, a commode of the great vintage year 1925 was knocked down at only 35.770 francs. In fact, several pieces failed to reach their reserve prices.

There was even one real giveaway in that sale — an exquisite Norwegian birch cabinet an inde in 1928. A Paris dealer, Michel Souilbac, bagged it for a petty 13,707 francs. This was an ominous beginning for Second Generation Art Deco.

The style has yet to be recognized, and, in-The style has yet to be recognized, and, in-deed, that part of the sale was a downright failure. A large dining table on arched legs made 3,016 francs and a long sideboard of 1937-40 only 2,900 francs. What was by far the post important piece in the whole auction failed to sell. This is a large macassar-ebony commode with floral marquetry in ebony and wother-of-pearl, made in 1937, the year of the great French Colonial Exhibition. by craftsmen who had been sent out to the French South Seas colonies to learn from the natives the art of cutting shells so as to bring out the luminosity of the mother-of-pearl.

Gaudy and heavy it may be, but it is also undoubtedly a historic piece that will sooner or later end up in some great museum of decorative art. André Leleu, the successor of Jules, says it took 2,000 hours to make the piece. On this basis alooe, the initial presale estimate, 250,000 francs, was not exaggerated. On the day of the sale the actual reserve price had been lowered to a modest 120,000 francs. The piece barely missed it and was bought in at 115,000 francs.

Some mistakes partly explain the failure. One was the inclusion in the sale of a number One was the melusion in the safe of a number of Leleu pieces from the late 1940s. Their unspeakable vulgarity and shabbiness dam-aged the image of the entire sale, acting as a powerful deterrent. Another big mistake on the organizers' part was not to have made it clear to the public that the pieces offered for sale were major symbols of their period. No less investing they did not emphasize

No less important, they did not emphasize the fact that they were authentic products of the Leleu workshop, unlike many so-called Leleu pieces designed by Leleu but executed in other worksbops. To make it swing, that sale needed a sense of history — since beauty bad little to do with it. But perhaps it is too soor for that

Sickert, Better Late Than Ever

ONDON - Walter Richard Sickert (1860-1942) was one of the few English artists of his generation whose work merits consideration in a European, and indeed, in an international context. Up to now, it has been fashionable, almost obligatory to consider his work in two distinct categories: Late and Early, after and before 1927, when his whole way of seeing and paint-ing seemed to change and when he replaced his signature of half a century — "Walter Sickert" with the preferred "Richard Sickert ARA."

Some purists and many scholars and com-mentators have argued that post-1927 Sickerts were the work of an old joker declining into senility, the mere shell of a opetime painter of genius. But such opinions will have to be radically altered in the light of a current loan exhi-bition organized by the Arts Council of Great Britain at the suggestion of the artist Frank Auerbach — "Late Sickert," at the Hayward at the Havwar Gallery, South Bank, to Jan. 31 and at the Sainsbury Center for the Visual Arts, University of East Anglia, Norwich, March 2 to April and at the Wolverhampton Art Gallery, April 12 to May 22. The exhibition, which comprises 121 of Sickert's later works, demonstrates beyond doub1 that the paintings of Sickert's old age based even though they often were on photographs, film stills, newspaper photographs and Victorian book illustrations, and quite often collaborations between Sickert and his pupils and assistants - are in no way inferior to those of his youth and, moreover, that the later

When Czapski started painting again after World War II at the age of 52 (all his past work had been destroyed by the war) he began to record such glimpses in hasty sketches and vivid, almost space paintings that kept splash-ing down on a single weighty reality: the odd-uess, beauty and longiness of life. paintings stem from, and are closely related to, the earlier.

Sickert, though accounted an English paintr, was born, as he liked gleefully to announce, in Germany of pure Danish stock. (This he remarked, for example, in steutorian tones while dining at St. James's Palace during World War I with Osbert Sitwell, that evening Captain of King's Guard). Brought to England at the age of 8 by his father, an artist and book illustrator, be studied for a short while at the Slade School of Art in London and briefly with Whistler, whom, with Degas, he took as his early models, never ceasing lifelong to quote Degas' emphasis on draftsmanship as the prime necessity for the artist.

After two years as a bit player with Sir Henry Irving's repertory theater company, Sickert settled to a lifetime of draftmanship and paint-ing, in the late 1880s and early 1890s working at a theater and music-hall series. From 1899 to 1905 he lived and painted in Dieppe, with frequent sorties to Venice and from 1905 on-ward be settled in London as teacher, artist settle and occasional critic and frequent raconteur, being a founder of the prestigious Camden Town Group in 1911. Thirty-four excellent examples of the early Sickert may be seen to Dec. 22 at Browse and Darby, 19 Cork Street, London W.1. In 1927 Sickert, now at an age at which many artists relax and live on their consider-able reputations, embarked on four major groups of paintings — Portraits, Theater and Film Pieces, Landscapes, and what be called "Echoes," paintings worked up often in blocks of unexpected and startling colors from photographs or from drawings by such Victorian illustrators as Crunkshank and Sir John Gilbert.

At an early exhibition of the new paintings, Sickert was heard to chortle "Cruikshank and Gilbert do all the work, and I get all the mon-ey," which has been interpreted as being cynical carelessness on the artist's part. In truth, it much better illustrates his happy-go-lucky atti-tude. He always quoted with approval John Gilbert's axiom "I like to paint with my com-forts about me," adding an axiom of his own: "An artist should be allowed every kind of

It is the fun element in the late Siekert that distressed so many sobersides, the fun exem-plified in "Sir Thomas Beecham Conducting" (1938); Edward G. Robinson and Joan Bion-dell in "Bullets and Ballots" (1936) — which he called "Jack and Jul" — "The Plaza Tiller Girls" (1928) and the chorus line of "High Steppers" (1938-39). The post-1927 Sickert was a liberator of technique. Up to that time he had painted in the classical manner of composing tones. Thereafter, painting in blocks of color, exchanging smooth fine canvas for coarse burlap and applying the paint sparingly enough to allow the texture of the material to play a major part in the finished work, he was technically able to dare to experiment, an experimentation possible to an old man certain of himself and his capabilities. Most of all the change was one of scale, as in such a painting as his self-portrait "The Servant of Abraham" (1929). "We cannot well have pictures on a large scale nowadays," said Sickert, "but we can have small fragments of pictures on a colossal scale." .

bland, empty landscape. His was a particularly American antitude. Under all these "ordinary" views, painted evenly without flourishes like the commercial work with which he made his living — of the endless dark woods near the last bouse in town, of the loncly people in musty rooms, of the railroad crossing at winter sun-set, of the iron lighthouses of Maine, of the waves crashing against the granite of Monhegan - under all this bleakness there glowers a deep romanticism. It is merely that the fire is carefully banked. Behind the understatement, the deadpan observation, all that dryness, there is a great passion, all the more striking here in Europe, where art tends to be more flamboyant and openly pleasing. However in late watercolors, pencil drawings and oils by Giorgio Morandi, Galleria Gian Fer-rari, via del Gesù 19, until Dec. 2, one can appreciate another master of succinciness on this side of the ocean. It is wonderful to see how a few meandering lines of brush or pencil, squiggly but sure, can open such spaces, or bring us to such intimacy. They are the bones of Morandi's thought, making images that are clear, sober and poetic.

The latest in contemporary art? Yes, there is of course the new "Transvanguardia." A leading exponent, Minuno Palatino at Gal-leria Franco Toselli, via del Car-mine 9, until Dec. 31, is young, and sacrifice. As always a little theatrical, Kounellis' statement is both cleanly modern and subtly romantie.

Despite the variety and the international scope of the art that is offered to them, it is sad to see how gullible and provincial the Milanese really are. For they are suffering from an acute case of Miro-itis, swallowing Miró whole in seven shows (no less!) of his last and least works, impressed only by the "big signature."

It is a fact that the best creations of Miro, who has been around for more than 80 years and was at his apex in the 1920s and 1930s, have long since been absorbed by the leading private and pubbe collec-tions of the world; although it is true that once a painter always a painter, and that Miro is still a superb crafisman and his gesture is still there.

the pleasure of completeness, but, instead, nudge the eye toward what is fleeting. One might even admit that his work is on the borderline of art, being first of all the durable trace of a humanistic discipline. (Galerie Jean Briance, rue Guénégaud, Paris 6, to Jan. 14).

Michel Gerard is a sculptor who appears to have entered his maturity. His present show (at the Galerie Jeanne Bucher, 53 rue de Seine, Paris 6, to Dec. 12) includes monumental piecand suggest the weight of a cast-iron fireback. Gérard, in his medium, is doing something characteristic of the work of quite a few contemporary French attists who are interested in the expressive value of this or that material when it has been worked upon. Gerard works his material with a hammer and one piece as-sembles a number of elements of varying shapes, all of them forged out of similar cubes of raw iron. The interesting thing is that all this escapes looking like a mere formal exercise and seems, instead, to mime the laborious density of a spiritual process.

Marilyn Levine is an astonishingly clever trompe-l'oeil ceramist whose pieces shown at the Galerie Alain Blondel (4 rue Aubry-le-Boucher, Paris 4, to Dec. 15) are all impeccable imitations of old leather objects, scuffed and cracked: suitcases, wallets, a jacket, lots of broken straps. Pierre Nivollet (Galerie NRA, 2 rue du Jour, Paris 1, to Dec. 5) is a painter who seems to have started out by building an ornamental cage of arabesques that cover the whole sur-face of his canvas, and then attempted to cancel, subvert or dissolve these patterns by abundant and resourceful use of vigorous color.

Nivollet is visibly working toward something and his work is intriguing because, what-ever it may be, it is not yet definable. My own perception is that of a debate between freedom and necessity.

Notes for a Study of Le Corbusier

by Esther Garcia

DARIS — "Do not take photographs: Draw. Photographs impede vision, sketching engraves things on the mind." Following his own dictum. Le Corhusier, the most influential architect of his time, kept a graphic diary, a kind of visual stream of consciousness. A small sketchbook was ulways to his pocket, during his trips, at home and at work. From 1914 to his death in 1965, he recorded landscapes, figures, architectural details, plans, comices and an infinite variety of impressions.

Seventy-three notebooks were filled. Le Corbusier numbered, dated and preserved them with great care: They were his capital and his idea-hank. He left them to the Le Corbusier Foundation, which has just published the com-plete notebooks in a four-volume edition. The foundation is also showing hundreds of the sketches and notations in photographic repro-duction (they are too fragile to handle otherwive) at the Villa La Roche, one of the six private houses Le Corbusier built in Paris.

The skys unfolding of a creative mind at work can be followed through this series of images and notes. Sometimes there is a fascinating, sudden jump from a sequence of visual stimuli to a practical application. There are countless drawings of ships, ships' cabins, corners of boats, details of decks, and then there is a note on the edge of one drawing that says: "It was in this cargo cabin going towards New York that I invented the Modulor system." The Modulor, the first architectural system to use man's measurements as a scale for construction, was, appropriately, arrived at in cramped quarters.

Le Corbusier was that rare combination, a technician and a creator. Born in Switzerland, he started out as Charles Edouard Jeanneret-Gris, studied art and became a painter. He then chose a new career, a new nationality and a new name. The French architect Le Corbusier developed a particular style that combined dedication, thetoric and personal magnetism and that helped him win some of the battles he continually fought with the international ar-chitectural establishment. Some of his grandest projects - for the United Nations buildings, for the port of Algiers, for the urban plan of Bogota - were battles he lost.

His triamphs were tempered by the difficulty of getting people to accept new ideas. In one of the notebooks he tells about revisiting a working-class quarter he constructed in Pessac, France, "We plunged into naked reality in the evening when only the volume shows and de-fects are not visible. It is a great purity, a joy. The road-mender, M. Pocquet, is the only one who understands. His garden is magnificent.

The others? They've can down a whole forest of oaks and chestnuts.

Le Corbusier's influence is far greater than his actual production of buildings. His tangi-ble legacy is made up of fewer than 40 buildings, one large project in India and, surprising-ly, only one building in all of North America, the Carpenter Arts Center at Harvard.

At the Paris show, the ramp that leads to the third floor at Villa La Roche is too steep for comfort. The light from the long windows set near the ceilings of the main studio is rather murky; the windows were not designed to be opened or cleaned. But the house has its beauvisitors tecter cheerfully down the ramp ťv. and the sketches and ootations are endlessly marcsting.

One of the notes, written after a long plane trip, could serve as an apologia for any shortcomings: "There are men who manipulate art and thought but ignore both the physical laws and the slowness of creativity. It takes a long time. You realize at the first slewing around of the plane, seeing the stars, that you are not made to understand everything and that it is belier to create partially than to do nothing

NEW YORK — The ease with which Kaare Gilboe Jr., a 33-year-old Norwegian-born ship broker, carried out illegal opera-tions and the possibility that others also may be playing his game have shocked the tradinon-bound ocean-shipping business. Mr. Gilboe created fictitious companies individuals and ships of such believability that millions of dollars were paid for their phantom services. In each case, the money vanished.

Mr. Gilboe has been investigated by police in Hong Kong, Tokyo and London, but in each instance the inquiries were dropped, possibly due to the complexity of his schemes and the difficulty of assembling wit-

On Nov. 6, however, Mr. Gilboe was con-victed in a federal court in New York of eight charges of wire fraud and illegal transportation of funds. He faces up to 60 years in prison plus $44,000 in fines at his sentenc-ing, scheduled for Dec. 4.

Shipowners "are now openly voicing their disquiet over the ease with which unscrupp-lous people have been able to turn the concept of 'my word is my bond" to their own criminal advantage,' comments Seatrade, a leading British maritime magazine.

The principal victim of Mr. Gllboe's oper-ations has been China, which rents ships to transport millions of tons of grain each year. Twice China, in effect, had to pay nearly double to get delivery of grain, with about $4 million going to Mr. Gilboe's nonexistent maritime concerns and about the same amount to legitimate operators who actually delivered the grain.

As a consequence, an official of China's ship-chartering company says the state-owned firm "has become extra careful to check out with whom it is doing business."

Mr. Gilboe's defense at his trial was that as a broker, he did not have authority to sign checks or transfer funds. Instead, he blamed

Shipping Fraud Floated on Phantom Firms three other persons in three other companies - all believed by authorities to be phantoms. Two other persons who were indicted along with Mr. Gilboe -- James Lam, a Chi-nese, and Richard Cunningham, an Australian -are known but have not been found.

Philippine Frand

In Mr. Gilboe's first known Iraud, in 1977, the Philippine National Lines, a government-owned vessel-chartering unit, asked him to find three ships to move 100,000 tons of U.S. grain to the Philippines. Mr. Gilboe arranged for the ships through a company called Maritime Shipping & Investment. Real ships were chartered, but Maritime Shipping never relayed the service fees to the Medardo Melicor, Philippine National's vice president of operations, testified at Mr. Gilboe's trial that his company lost $989,000.

Mr. Gilboe's next big venture occurred in early 1979. China was seeking three ships to transport 100,000 tons of Argentine gram to China. When this fraud was completed, Chi-na had been duped out of nearly $1.3 mil-lion. In addition, the Chinese had to pay an added $1 million in freight payments to two essel owners.

Mr. Gilboe then moved on to Tokyo, and again the Chinese were his targets in a com-plex nperation in which Mr. Gilboe masqueraded as a representative of two re-putable companies at the same time.

First, he set up operation with Mr. Cum-ingham as Gulf Pacific Chartering and then nbtained permission from a friend at Tokyo Freighting, a respected concern, to use that company's telex for incoming messages. Next, bc put out word that he represented W.H. Eddie Hsu, chairman of Eddie Steamship, a reputable Taiwanese company. Then Mr. Gilboe falsely told a broker with Tokyn Chartering, another reputable concern, that he represented Robina Shipping, a unit of the well-known Ednasa group of Hong Kong, Tokyo Chartering, working through five legitimate brokers in London and Copenhagen, contracted for three ships.

Two weeks before the three ships loaded in New Orleans, Mr. Gilboe — posing as To-kyo Freighting — telezed Howard Houlder, the broker representing the Chinese, to send the service fee not to Tokyn Freighting at its Japanese bank but to Royal Bank & Trust Co. in New York on behalf of Maritime Brokers, a company that still has not been found.

The ships were loaded in New Orleans in August, 1980, and the Chinese, following Mr. Gilboe's instructions, sent $2.9 million from Bank of China in Peking through Bank of Tokyo, New York, to Royal Bank & Trust in New York for Maritime Brokers.

Shortly afterwards, the actual shipowners whn were carrying the grain far which they had not been paid began to complain. The shipowners threatened to seize the grain for non-payment of the freight bills, and China paid about $2.3 million to the legitimate operators.

Mr. Gilboe's testified that Mr. Cunning-ham, and not he, had arranged to charter the three ships with a Charles R. Hardy Jr. of Maritime Brokers for the account of Eddic Hsu. He had only acted as a broker, he said, and the payments were handled by Mr. Cunningham and Mr. Hardy. Investigators doubt the existence of Mr. Hardy and Maritime Brokers.

The missing money has been tracked as far as the Bahamas. After arriving at the Royal Bank & Trust in New York, the money was first moved to Republic National Bank and from there to the Chase Manhattan Bank, both in New York, and then to Chase Manhattan of Nassau for the account of Numan Construction & Development Co on Bay Street, a mail drop in Nassau.

But investigators do not know what Numan is or where the money is now.

Since July, the mysterious buying of tin, a metal not otherwise in great world demand, has sent prio-e-souring on the LME and in Penang, Malaysia, the other major tin market.

Prices Surge

On the LME, tin prices surged to a record high of £8,650 n ton varier this month from £6,500 in July, though prices settled somewhat Friday as dealers awaited some indication of what the unknown buyer would do next. The daily volume, which long averaged perhaps 1,000 metric tons, boomed to over 36,000 ions Thursday from 11.000 tons Wednesday.

the exchange said Friday. The exchange said io its latest "Public Transaction Study" that during the fourth quarter of 1980, institutional and financial in- termediaries such as commercial banks and trust companies accounted for 64.9 percent of the public share volume compared with 35.1 percent for individuals. The iostitutions and financial intermediaries accounted for 71.7 percent of the public dollar volume, the exchange said. The last such study done by the exchange was in the first quarter of 1976. Foreign activity accounted for 11.7 percent of the public share volume, the NYSE said. It said foreign investors accounted for 5 percent of all individual volume and 15 percent of in- stitutional volume. Over the past 20 years, the proportion of share volume accounted for by individuals and institutions had been reversed, the NYSE said. Io 1961, for instance, individuals accounted for 67 percent of the public share volume and institutions and intermediaries, 33 percent. In 1967, individuals accounted for 29.7 per- cent of the public dollar volume while institu- ions and intermediaries accounted for 70.3 percent.	24% 14% PortPern 57 15%	HONG KONG A special supplement by the International Herald Tribune For scheretising information contact: Chrit Cheney International Herald Tribune 1801 Tai Sang Commercial Bldg: 34-34 Hernasty Road Heng Kong Td.: 5-283618/9, Teleer 61170. investigations in the modern world. As early as 1908, Rilke said about a

we must live differently." Impressionism, according to Rus-sell, was the apotheosis of pleasure in sheer looking. As he puts it, the Im-pressionists make us "think better of Fauvism, which was a brutalization of Impres-sionism, went too far and "pushed color into an untenable and self-defeating position." The art that came after Impression-ism was determined to gratify an insa-tiable and querulous curiosity. Using himself as the raw material of his ex-thing must be discovered." He wanted to recreate the astonishment of the first man in the world "who must have seen auguries everywhere and trembled with every step he took." In Edvard Munch's "The Scream,"

"There is no reason," Robert Rauschenberg said, "not to consider the world as one gigantic painting." In his multimedia "Bed," he demonthis, it goes beyond what Gustave Morean called "The sad accountancy of common sense." Art, in Russell's way of thinking, is an alternative lan-guage in which we tell secrets to one another. Henri Bergson was halfway to this thought when he said that "we strated, according to Russell, "paint's to operate "in the gap between art and life," a bed seemed a logical have to express ourselves in words, but most often we think in space." Beyond enabling us to see who and where we are, art also teaches us how to see. As Russell observes, "Cizanne where the error in the regime of the and life." a bed seemed a logical place. That gap between art and life, Rus-sell says, seems to have frightened some people into thinking that we may be approaching the end, the ex-haustion, of art, that there may be be-fore us now "only a long littleness." But in "The Meaning of Modern Art," he joyously banishes this Torschusspanik, this fear of the clos-ing of the door. rebuilt the experience of secing," res-cuing it from the tyranny of habit. When Van Gogh said that he and his fellow artists painted things not as they are, but as they felt them, he was inviting us to enjoy the same freedom. Until the latter part of the 19th cen-tury, Russell writes, "art was one of the learned professions and it was not ing of the door. Someone observed that there is nothing more exciting than an idea, nothing more exciting than in loca, and Russell's book is a gorgeous pan-demonium of ideas, illustrated with 328 pages, 101 in color. "The Mean-ing of Modern Art" is also a cogent cultural history that synthesizes paint-ing, sculpture, literature, social atmos-reference and politics. One finpheres, science and politics. One finishes the book feeling as Emerson did on another occasion when he said "I have enjoyed a perfect exhilaration. I am glad to the brink of fear."

New York Library Replacing British Books Lost in War

New York Times Service

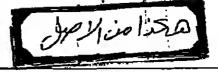

NEW YORK - On May 10, 1941, the German Luftwaffe dropped a cluster of incendiary bombs that struck the old Iron Library of the British Museum. The southwest quadrant of the institution on Great Rus-sell Street in Bloomsbury was de-stroyed, with a loss of 250,000 volumes - including a large number of American titles.

Now, 40 years later, in the base-ment of the New York Public Library on Fifth Avenue, the photographic section is cagaged in a scholarly trans-atlantic mission: microfilming nearly 6,000 books destroyed during the blitz to fill in the Americana shelves in the British (formerly Museum) Library.

The range of material being microfilmed covers the humanities and so-cial sciences, medical journals and law books, scientific and technical subjects, and official documents from federal, state and local governments. Titles range from "The Art of Batting to Base Running" to "The Law of Adultery & Ignominious Punishments."

Photocopies of catalog envies for books missing from the British Li-brary's shelves enable the New York Public Library to determine what can be replaced by microfilming from its own holdings. The microfilming is expected to take five years.

Games Get Tighter As NFL Moves Into Week 13 of Season

By William N. Wallace New York Tunes Service

NEW YORK - Two National Football League games were decided by one point last Sunday and Monday, the Jets' 16-15 victo-ry over Miami followed by Atlanta's 31-30 decision over Minnesota. And on Thanksgiving Day, the Cowboys edged the Bears, 10-9. Those were the 41st, 42d and 43d games to be decided by three points or less this season, roughly a quarter of the total played to is this a newly defined trend reflecting the closeness of the teams? It is more a continuation of a trend according to the NFL statisticians.

NFL PREVIEW

Last year 48.2 percent of the 224 regular season games were decided by seven points or less, and the margin was three points or less for 25.9 percent of the total.

Comparable percentages two seasons ago were 46.4 for seven points or less and 22.7 or three or less. This year there has been one tie score (the first Miami-Jets contest); four one-point decisions; 10 by two and 27 by three. In the 13th week of the season the select game will come on Monday night when two teams hattling for division honors - the Eagles and the Dolphins - meet in Mi-

A preview of the NFL weekend follows (records in parentheses; betting lines from Harrah's Reno Sports Book):

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Giants (6-6) at San Francisco (9-3) - The 49ers' home field, natural grass, is badly damaged, and only 95 points have been scored there in the past three games. (The league average this season is 42.4, the highest ever.) That may be an advantage to the Giants, who rely so much on their defense. The 49ers' Freddy Solomon and Dwight Clark have caught 116 passes, more than any other pair of wide receivers. Betting line: San Francisco by 6.

Green Bay (5-7) at Minnesota (7-5) — The Vikings' record in their division is 4-1 with three games remaining. The Packers have only one healthy quarterback, the rookie Rich Campbell whose debut in last game was a near disaster, It is hoped David Whitchurst will be able to start instead. Betting line: Minnesota by S.

Tampa Bay (6-5) at New Orleans (4-8) — The Buccaneers are very much in the playoff picture with a team that not even the coach, John McKay, views with pride. The Saints' rookie, 'George' Rogers,' continues to average over 100 yards rushing a game. Betting fine: Tampa Bay by 2.

a sore shoulder and did not play last Sunday, remains questionable. Betting line: San Diego by 4.

Baltimore (1-11) at Jets (7-4-1) - The Colts have lost their last seven games by margins ranging from 11 to 29 points. Of the Jets' future opponents, Baltimore followed by Scattle, Cleveland and Green Bay, not one has a winning record. The collective won-lost totals are 15-33. Should the Jets fail to make the playoffs now they would have to invent many ex-would have to invent many ex-cuses, Beiting line: Jets by 13. Cincinnati (9-3) at Cleveland (5-7) — In winning their last four games the Bengals outscored their opponents, 136-69, and in 12 games they have had only 15 turnovers. The Browns' season may as well have ended with the latest defeat, to Pittsburgh. Could the loss of the center, Tom DeLeone, have been the cause of the team's col-

Japas? Betting line: Even. Oakland (5-7) at Seattle (4-8) ---Those 55 points scored by the Chargers were the most any Raider team had given up in 20 years. This squad's other lowlight was failing to score in three straight games in October. The Seahawks have railied a bit, winning three of their last five games. Betting line: Oakland by 2.

INTERCONFERENCE

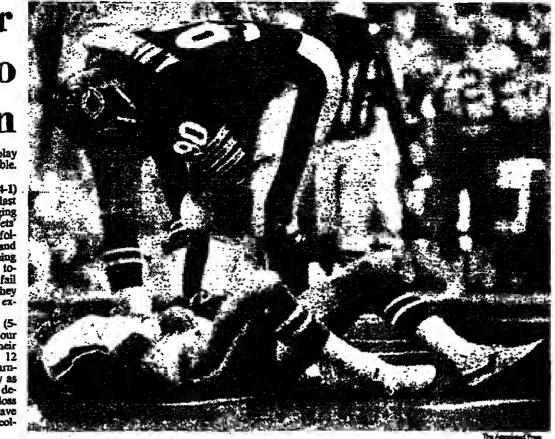

Atlanta (6-6) at Houston (5-7) -The footballs at last began to bounce the Falcons' way in the second half of their victory over Minnesota. Their realistic goal is to be the NFC's second wildcard team in the playoffs. It is difficult now for the coach. Ed Biles, to hold the Oiler team together while everyone awaits the next move of the owner, Bud Adams. He has always been quick to dismiss and discharge. Betting line: Atlanta by

Los Angeles (5-7) at Pittsburgh (7-5) — The Ram coach, Ray Malavasi, has said a dozen times he will not play musical chairs with his quarterbacks, but he is. White Bruises Ribs

Carano, who has spent his entire career as either third-string quart-erback behind Roger Staubach or backup to Danny White, was forced into action when White sustained bruised ribs in the second quarter.

The Cowboys sputtered with Carano at the controls until early in the third quarter after the Bears had gone ahead, 9-3, Ed Jones stormed through to block the would-be extra point by Roveto. Carano first moved Dallas from its own 20 to the Chicago 2-yard line, with the help of a 55-yard pass to Tony Hill only to have a fourth-down pass play batted down by Mike Hartenstine. But Chicago was forced to pubt

Bear Bryant Vies for No. 315 As Alabama Takes On Auburn

By Gordon S. White Ir. New York Times Service

NEW YORK - On the first series of plays against Penn State two weeks ago, Alabama had a fourth down and less than a yard to go at its 45-yard line. It never considered punting. After a timeout for consultation with Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant, the quarterback Alan Gray set the team in a tight wishbone. It seemed apparent to Penn State that Alabama would try a dive play for the first down.

Suddenly Gray backpedaled before the snap from center, and the three running backs took a step toward the line. It was a legal shift, and it drew the entire Penn State defensive front offside, resulting in a 5-yard penalty and a first down. The cunning tactie had been used many times by Bryant.

It was clear then that the coach had come prepared for anything, and that Penn State bad oot. Alabama won, 31-16, and Bryant, who is 68 years old, had his 314th victory in 37 years as a head coach, tying the record set in 1946 by Amos Alonzo Stagg in 57 years of coaching. On Saturday, when Alabama plays Au-burn, he will go for the record.

Trademark

Tactical use of the rules has become a trademark of Bryant's coaching. When be was at Kentucky, and then later at Alabama, be pulled the tackle-cligible pass play so many times in victories over Mississippi that John Vaught, the Mississippi coach from 1947 through 1970, and a member of the football rules committee, had the rules changed. Now tackles are not eligible to catch a pass, except under specific con-ditions that make them obvious to the defense as Paul William Bryant was born Sept. 11, 1913 in Moro Bottom, Ark., a speck on the map that be al-ways describes as "a little piece of bottom land oo the Moro Creek, about seven miles south of Fordyce, Arkansas." One of 11 children in a poor family, be seemed destined to be a farmer on unyielding, hot land from the day be could work the fields.

But the young Bryant yearned for more, and often rode the rails during his teens to see what else was offered in the world. During his years at Fordyce High School, he earned the most famous nickname in football and set the course of his life with that sport. In his biography, written with John Underwood, Bryant says:

I remember one summer we walked in from the Bottom to Mr. Smith's picture theater in Fordyce, The Lyric Theater. I remember the Jordan twins were with me, we called them Click and Jud, and they were my best friends and the best athletes Fordyce High ever had.

"There was a poster out front with a pieture of a bear, and a guy was offering a dollar a minute to anyone who would wrestle the bear. Mr. Smith was excited because the guy who was supposed to wrestle the bear hadn't showed up. They egged me on, and Mr. Smith lined it up with the fellow who had the bear. Mr. Smith agreed to let me and my friends into the picture free."

Bryant wrestled the "scrawny" bear to the floor, but it bit his car. "After the show was over," he said, "I went around to get my money, but the man with the bear had flown the coop. All I got out of the whole thing was a nickname."

Bryant, who is 6 feet 4 inches tall, was a goodenough tackle at Fordyce to be recruited by the University of Alabama, where be became "the other end" in 1933-1935. He was at right end and at left was ceiver for Cecil 1shell when they played for the Green Bay Packers. Bryant went a different route, getting a job as an assistant coach at Alabama and then shifting to Vanderbilt.

After the 1941 season, he served five years in the Navy, and was discharged just in time to take the head coaching job at Maryland for the 1945 season. Thus began one of the stormiest and most colorful careers in college football history, a career that could last a few more seasons.

After one year at Maryland, Bryant took over at Kentucky, where be remained for eight seasons. Then he moved to Texas A&M for four seasons that were troublesome. He returned to his alma mater in 1958.

Despite the many criticisms and problems he has lived through, Bryant is praised by many of his for-mer players. John David Crow, the Aggie running back, was the only Bryant player to win a Heisman Trophy as the best player in the nation. The coach developed other outstanding players over the last three decades, particularly quarterbacks such as George Blanda and Babe Parilli at Kentucky, and Steve Sloan, Joe Namath, Ken Stabler and Richard Todd at Alabama Entry for the first stable of the first stab Todd at Alabama. Forty-four of his former players have become head college coaches, including Jackie Sherrill of Pittsburgh and Danny Ford of Clemson.

He had a stormy tenure at Texas A&M. The school was put on probation for violating National Collegi-ate Athletic Association rules, and Bryant later admitted that some of his players had been paid. But he said be had not done the paying and did not know who bad.

His most difficult time came when an article in The Saturday Evening Post said that he and Wally Butts, the Georgia coach, arranged to fix the result of the Alabama-Georgia game Sept. 22, 1962. The charge was based on someone's saying that he had overbeard a phone conversation between Bryant and Butts.

Alabama won the game, 35-0. Butts won a record judgment in a libel suit against the Curtis Publishing Co. Bryant also sued, but his case never went to court as he received a huge out-of-court settlement.

Bryant has been accused of striking his players. calling the shots on what teams play in certain bowl games, telling the president of Alabama how to run the school, and playing dirty football. What has been proved, however, is that he wins with fast, small players, as in his early years at Alabama; that be win with big strong players, as he does now, and that he changes with the trends in football, as displayed by his conversion to the wishbone attack when that came out in the late 1960s.

God-Like Figure

A Southeastern Conference coach says of Bryant; "He's calculating in all respects. I respect him but don't revere him as his players do. He is the best this game has had, but he has always done what is con-venient and he has admitted be has broken the rules. Now he is something of a God-like figure. Whatever it takes, he does it to win. He is an outstanding coach, pays a big price for it and has stayed powerful for 40 years or longer. And through it all, he is an actor.

Bryant, who is easy to spot as the tall man wearing the black and white hound's tooth hat on the sideline, is said to be a millionaire. He has endorsed soft drinks, hats and automobiles, and has served as a bank officer. He can be soft-spoken or gruff, and is known to call on God, mother and alma mater every day.

Art Buchwald Kill Those Asteroids!

WASHINGTON - The big news for Christmas is that video games are hotter than ever. This means more people will be shooting down more asteroids, space invaders, UFOs and un-friendly missiles than ever before. The video games are home versions of arcade games that have been the rage of the United States this year, not only with young-·OT Sters būt grownups as well.

grownups as well. I stopped into ao areade the other day and asked a man in a pin-striped suit. standing at an Buchwald electronic machine, what he was doing.

"I'm shooting down asteroids," he said. "Anyone can see that. But why? Because i put a quarter in the machine and if 1 doo't shoot them down, I'll hlow my money."

"Do you have anything personal against asteroids?" "Hell, no." he said, "I don't even know what they are." "Suppose 1 told you that asteroids are minor planets that re-volve around the sun between Mais and Jupiter and are no threat to Earth. Would that change your mind about wanting to shoot them down? "Not if I put a quarter in the machine." he said.

"Do you realize that at the rate people are shooting down as-teroids there might not be any left by 1984?"

"Hey, look, fellow. I doo't oeed you to tell me what to shoot down in an arcade."

particles of matter created when the solar system was born. They are absolutely oo threat to us. As a matter of iact, they may be preventing us from having skin cancer.

The Associated Press WASHINGTON - The federal government decided to recom-1992 world's fair, noting that the -fair would commemorate the 500th aaniversary of Christopher Columbus discovery of the Americas. The bid will be sent to the Board of International Expositions, the treaty organization, which regu-

"Why would the people who designed this game program it with asteroids if they didn't want us to shoot them down?"

"Because all they are interested in is your quarters. I don't think any of them has seen one." Look at my score, While I was talking to you I only shot down one asteroid." "That's one too many," I told him. He moved to another machine called "Space Invaders." I stopped him as he was about to put a quarter in the machine. Why are you going to shoot down people from outer space?" I asked him.

Because they are going to attack us." he said.

How do you know that?" "It says so, right here on the screen." "They put that on the machine pose those spaceships were coming here on a close encounter of the third kind? Maybe there are women and children on them. How would you feel if someone from another planet shot down your space shuttle?"

"Hey, look, I have only 15 minutes of my lunch hour left. What business is it of yours anyway?"

"Because there are too many people in this country who want to shoot at something. It puts Ameri-cans in a very bad psychological frame of mind. It's worse for the kids. They are starting to think that war is a video game, and we can shoot down anything with a quarter."

* * * "What about the Missile Command game? I have to protect six cities from enemy missiles. Do you have anything against protecting I replied. "Asteroids are small our cities from enemy missiles?"

"Once you put the quarter in and shoot down the first wave of armed missiles, the computer escalates the game by sending over 'smart' ones, and no matter how many you destroy, the cities get it in the end."

Fair Nomination

The man in the pin-striped suit said, "You really know how to min a guy's lunch hour," and be stomped out The owner of the arcade, who was watching the scene, came over to me and said, "Mister, you've got two minutes to get out of this place, or I'll break both your legs." "I'd expect a threat like that from somebody who encourages people to kill asteroids."

International Herald Tribune DARIS - George Steiner is small, vivacious, flashing with intelligence. He is a teacher, writer and critic although be would choose none of these words to describe himself. "The French have an incredibly pompous, comical 19th-cen-tury title which I think is lovely, maître de pensee, and that's just right and nobody dares use it anymore. It's what I'd love oo my gravestone because it's so pompously and beautifully French."

wince an

He works in French, English, German and Italian and his books have been translated into 18 languages. Language itself is his major theme; to read is a political act. "We now know, as Aristotle did but as many bave forgotten, did but as many bave forgotten, that the arts are ideological; that politics, that the refusal of politics, is a profoundly political act; that the very great writers — I suppose Kafka is the greatest po-bitcal scientist of this century, the one who saw totalitarianism to arouse your killer instinct. Supcoming - the great poets are the imaginers of our politics." Much of his work has been concerned with trying to understand the Holocaust and a world which makes mass murder — of Russians, Africans and Asians as well as Jews — acceptable.

In an essay called "A Season in Hell" he wrote that the Holocanst marks a second Fall, a voluntary exit from Eden and a deliberate attempt to burn the garden behind us: "The concentracen behind us: The concentra-tion and death camps of the twentieth century, wherever they exist, under what regime, are Hell mode immanent. They are the transference of Hell from below the center of the processory of the the the earth to its surface Needing Hell, we have learned how to build and run it oo earth. . . . In locating Hell above ground we have passed out of the major order and symmetries of Western civilization."

The world described in this essay from "In Bluebeard's Castle" (1970) is the world of Steiner's first novel, "The Portage to San Cristobal of A.H.," published this winter in London and Paris. a terse and disturbing work that imagines a nonagenarian Adolf Hitler alive and well in the steaming and stinking jungles of Brazil (our corrupted Eden). The novel ends with a sensational monologue in which Hitler defends himself as a man of his time: "My crimes were matched and surpassed by others," he says, It is thanks to him, Hitler -Mary Blume-

The novel came from a simple question Steiner asked himself: if Hitler entered a room today, would we stand up? "The whole novel is perhaps an attempt to answer that. And I know damn well we would get up. I am trying to grapple with what it is that would make us get up.

"There have been very few fictional treatments of Hitler and the very few have tried to bring him down to our size. I know that's an error, I just know that is to betray responsibility, so I took the contrary method, which is that of hallucination. He just wasn't of our size. The present estimate is that by the year 2000 there will be more books on him-than on Napoleon, running just short of Christ at the present."

The Word

The novel is part of Steiner's basic subject of study: the word. "If in the beginning was the Word, capital W, it may be the end. I am speculating with the thought that a Hitler almost knew that word, knew the last word. The expression 'having the last word' hannts me. What does it mean to have the last word? In that expression there is a tremendous edge of destruction."

George Steiner was born in Paris of Viennese parents in 1929 and moved to New York in 1940. He got his B.A. from the Univer-sity of Chicago in only one year, took his decount at Orion and took his doctorate at Oxford and spent four years in London on The Economist magazine, speci-alizing in European and American affairs. In the U.S. for The Economist he met Robert Oppenheimer, which led to an invitation to join Princeton's Institute of Advanced Study; he was the young-est member ever and one of the few in the arts.

Later, again through Oppen-heimer. he joined Cambridge University's oew Churchill Col-lege and he lives in Cambridge with his wife, a distinguished dip-lomatic historian. He teaches each year in the U.S., has been a literary critic of The New Yorker since 1966 and holds the chair of six months a year. One of his most impassioned recent articles was about the super-establishment spy, Anthony Blant

"The piece on Blunt explores amoog other things the violence latent in pure intellectuality. I am profoundly struck by the fact that we have underestimated the sheer brutal power of concentrated thinking, the fact that it both cuts you off from the world and turns you against the world.

> 'Autistic Activity' "But the Blunt is more a reflection on the crazy state of the years to define something central in the condition of the West and pure scholar. You're a great scholar, you've sweated the last of our poetics and politics." ounce of blood in a five-volume definitive work on some tiny is-sue and there's only one person basically different from his critical works, "For me 'After Babel,' asking questions about the word, is already the novel. So is 'Lanin the world who will read it; your enemy who hopes to find a mistake. This is an almost autis-

If his other works have won respect and are used in many universities, "The Portage to San Cristobal of A.H.," which Cristo-pher Hampton is adapting for the London stage, has brought Steiner before a wide public on redia or 27 radio and TV. "Of course it's thrilling and if I earn well I'm going to buy a good chess computer. I have one in Geneva, a small bad one and I would like to invest, if I make some money, in a better one." Steiner clearly enjoys the attention, but enough is enough, "All this public attention - the novel is coming out in so many languages now - all this is something very new to me and a little outside myself. And it comes late, this kind of circus. I ache to get back to Antigone, who's a very severe, a very silent, lady."

Thatcher's criticism of dog-eating in the Philippines drew a sharp re-action from a Filipino polisician who said Mrs. Thatcher should concern herself with Irish political concern nersed with this poincar prisoners. Assemblyman Eddie larde said the slaughter of dogs for food was prohibited in most parts of the Philippines. He said Filipinos are really as "dog-loving" as the British. "Mrs. Thatcher should not be disturbed by the way Filipinos treat dogs because the few of us who are sometimes cruel. to these animals cannot be more cruel than even the British themselves, who have been cruel not only to animals but human beings. in their colonies in the past flarde said. A picture of a dog muzzled by wire with its front legs tied behind its back was published in the Sunday Mirror. The photo prompted James Wellbeloved, a member of Parliament, to urge Mrs. Thatcher to denounce to the Philippine government this "barhanc cruelty" heaped on dogs be-fore being slaughtered and caten. "I felt the same repugnance as you, and I am sure all members in this house would feel repugnance at that horrible photograph," Mrs. Thatcher said. A British Embassy spokesman in Manila said Britain's "repugnance" was 'quietly passed on to the foreign ministry in Manila and the response was that it was an internal affair of the
